CHIANG MAPS PLAN TO HALT RUSSIAN DRIVE

Heavy Massing of Soviet Troops on Border Is Reported.

CHINA CHIEFS CONFER OVER 'GRAVE SITUATION'

Government Believed Still Hopeful War May Be Averted.

JAPAN'S INTERVENTION FOR PEACE IS HINTED

Martial Law Is Proclaimed at Harbin; Civilians Flee Frontier.

Associated Press.

The break between Russia and China over the Manchurian situation has become a diplomatic actuality with the German government's agreement to take charge of Russian interests in China and Chinese interests in Russia.

Formal notification of Russia's decision to cease relations with China was received at Nanking in a second note from Moscow, which carried out the warning of the first Russian note of July 13.

President Chiang Kai-Shek summoned an emergency conference of Nationalist government leaders to consider the Manchurian question, after receipt of a telegram from Gov. Chang Hsueh-Liang that "the situation is extremely grave" in view of Russian troop concentration along the frontier.

The Nationalist government apparently had not lost hope of reaching an amicable settlement with Russia. Japan was possibly prepared to intervene between Russia and China in the interest of peace in the Far East. Premier Hamaguchi and Foreign Minister Shidehara, who are not "officially" informed of developments, conferred on the situation as conveyed in press reports.

Troop Movements General.

Troop movements were generally reported on both sides of the frontier, but no fighting seemed to have developed.

Moscow newspapers continued strong disapproval of the Chinese reply to the original Russian note.

Tokyo, July 18 (A.P.).—Japanese News Agency dispatches tonight reported that martial law had been proclaimed in Harbin after announcement of the diplomatic break between Russia and China. All newspapers, including Japanese, were censored. Business was at a standstill and streets were heavily patrolled by Chinese soldiers.

Gen. Chang Ching-Hui made a proclamation that the death penalty would be enforced on persons spreading alarmist reports. Concentration of Russian troops opposite Manchuli was said to be growing rapidly heavier.

The same report TH THinrtJ;goo q The same dispatches said that hundreds of Chinese civilians were fleeing from the border towns of Manchuli and Progranichnaya. The latter community was panicy.

The Japanese consulate general in Harbin was crowded day and night by Russians seeking visas to permit them to go to Dairen, which is a Japanese leasehold. It was understood that they were not permitted to go to Japan proper, Consul General Yagi presided at a meeting today of representatives of the Japanese community to discuss emergency measures for the protection of Japanese lives and property should disorders occur.

Germany in Neutral Role.

Berlin, July 18 (A.P.).—The German government tonight agreed to take over the interests of Chinese in Russia and Russians in China for the period in which direct diplomatic relations between those countries remain disrupted. It was emphasized on all sides that this was a certain indication of the absolute neutrality of Germany in the present dipsute over the administration of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

Requests for its good offices came to the foreign office today from Russia through the German Ambassador at Moscow and from China through the legation of that government here. Both Chancellor Hermann Mueller and Foreign Minister Gustav Stresemann were away, which fact resulted in some delay in answering.

Unconfirmed reports reached Berlin today that a small Russian invasion of Manchuria had been repulsed and that the chief Russian concentration was at Manchuli, on the border.

A Kovno dispatch of the Telegraphen Union says that the German consuls in Mukden and Harbin took over the affairs of the Russian consulates today and that the Russian representatives have been given safe conducts by the Chinese government.

Treat Situation Lightly.

Peiping, China, July 18 (A.P.).—Foreign diplomats here were inclined tonight not to take a very serious view of the Manchurian situation despite severance of diplomatic relations between Russia and China.

They believed that it is even yet quite possible an armed conflict can be

CAPT. ROSS G. HOYT.

HOYT TESTS ARMY PLANE IN LONG HOP

Increase of Pursuit Range May Result From Alaska Flight.

FAST SCHEDULE PLANNED

Mitchel Field, N. Y., July 18 (A.P.).—Starting a day ahead of schedule, Capt. Ross G. Hoyt took off for Alaska today expecting to be back Sunday, the fastest flight of such length ever made.

He had not planned to leave until tomorrow, but weather reports were favorable so he hopped at 1:39 Eastern Standard Time this afternoon. His course to Nome Alaska, is 4,230 miles long and he expects to make the 8,460 mile round trip in 75 hours and 40 minutes elapsed time, including eight one-hour stops for refueling and a six-hour layover at Nome. Actual time in the air is scheduled at 61 hours and 40 minutes, an average of 140 miles an hour.

The Hoyt schedule, in Eastern Daylight Time: Minneapolis, Minn., 1,030 miles, 10 p. m., Thursday; Edmonton, Alta., 1,100 miles, 7 a. m., Friday; Whitehorse, Yukon, 1,100 miles, 4 p. m., Friday; Fairbanks, Alaska, 500 miles, 8:40 p. m. Friday, Nome, 500 miles, 1 a. m., Saturday.

Capt. Hoyt, who had charge of refueling the army endurance plane Question Mark, planned this flight to test the efficiency of increasing the range of Army pursuit flying by stepping up the present horsepower and adding extra gas tanks. His plane, a black and yellow single seater with "U. S. Army" painted on the underside, is capable of 180 miles an hour, but he figured on a certain amount of head winds in arranging his schedule. For nourishment he carried three bottles, one of water, one of orange juice and one of eggs and milk.

District Man Acquitted Of Mann Act Violation

At a preliminary hearing yesterday John L. Dade, of Washington, and Mrs. Blanche Ochiltree, of Indianapolis, were freed of charges of conspiracy to violate the Mann act on which they had been arrested at St. Louis last week.

After testimony was given that the woman had paid her own fare and had come to St. Louis of her own accord to meet Dade, United States Commissioner Atkins ruled the evidence insufficient to hold them. Hearing on additional charges of possession of a stolen Army pistol were continued. Dade exhibited a receipt showing he had purchased the gun from a dealer in Washington.

PLAN TO LOWER NAVAL BUILDING PROGRAM SEEN

Joint Reduction in British and U. S. Schedules Forecast in London.

M'DONALD, CHURCHILL ENGAGE IN HOT CLASH

Former Chancellor Prods Premier for News on Negotiations.

HINT OF BARGAINING CONTAINED IN REPLY

England Will Cut Preparations if Washington Agrees, Is Intimation.

London, July 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Negotiations between the United States and Great Britain regarding naval limitation are immediately concerned or partly concerned at present with a plan to abandon in each country part of the building program for the coming year.

Such was the understanding in parliamentary circles tonight following a sharp clash in the house of commons today between Premier Ramsay MacDonald and former chancellor of the exchequer, Winston Churchill, in which both men used carefully guarded language.

Instead of a spontaneous gesture by Great Britain toward America to take the form of not laying down ships which were planned by the late Conservative government, it seems clear, reading between the lines of what MacDonald said today under prodding from Churchill, that the British move is to be taken by agreement with the United States only after negotiations are successfully completed that can only imply a proposed similar gesture by the United States.

Routine Reply Starts Sparks.

The subject came up at question time in commons today and was opened by First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander, who made a routine reply to a Conservative back-bencher that he had nothing to say regarding the 1928 program of naval construction. Churchill rose and asked whether "before any important decision reversing the naval program is taken parliament will be informed and have an opportunity of expressing its opinion."

Tory cheers greeted this and MacDonald got up instead of the first lord of the admiralty, saying:

"The government will take just the ordinary powers of the government in that respect."

Churchill pressed for a fuller answer and MacDonald replied:

"The government will just exercise its judgment with full knowledge of its responsibility to the house, and beyond that it is not possible at the moment to go."

Churchill Is Hooted.

"Are we to understand," persisted Churchill, "that a most grave and important decision of this kind is being withheld until parliament reassembles after nearly three months?"

"I think that is a most unworthy suggestion," retorted the premier with heat amid Labor cheers. Some Labor members hooted Churchill and tried to shout him down as he continued:

"Will the right honorable gentlemen endeavor to secure to the House facilities for ventilating this question before we separate for the long interval?"

MacDonald, replying to this amid demonstrations on both sides of the house, made remarks which may be held to mean that a naval cut here is dependent upon similar action in the United States. He said:

"I have said over and over again that I am doing my very best to get

Dollar Buys More Now Than in 1926, Report

(Associated Press.)

The dollar bought more in June than it did three years ago.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics announced yesterday the purchasing power of the June dollar was 103.7 as compared with 100 in 1926.

It purchased less meat, butter and cheese in June than it did three years ago, the bureau said, but in other foods the dollar represented 113.0 in purchasing power as compared with 1926.

The biggest change in the purchasing power was in rubber, of which more than twice as much could be bought for the same money. In drugs the dollar could get almost half as much again.

Fuel and lighting materials led the price increases in June over May with advances reported for California and Kansas-Oklahoma crude petroleum, fuel oil and gasoline.

Among farm products price increases were reported for wheat, corn, beef steers, calves, lemons, oranges and onions. There were decreases for hogs, sheep, lambs, live poultry, hay and wool.

CITIZENS WITH GUNS BARRED IN DRY RAIDS

CARAWAY PLEA UNHEEDED

Federal prohibition agents are warned not to take armed citizens along with them on liquor raids in an order issued yesterday by Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran.

Although Doran said the order was not precipitated by any particular case, it follows closely the killing of two men in Tecumseh, Okla. The raiders were W. W. Thomason and Jeff Harris, his "unofficial assistant."

The two men killed were James Harris, a World War veteran not related to Jeff Harris, and Oscar Lowery. Both the prohibition agent and his assistant have been charged with the murder, but, according to the testimony, the killings were actually committed by the assistant.

News of the Doran order broke after another day of discussion of the now-celebrated Wickersham letter suggesting that the States take over the local enforcement of prohibition.

President Hoover, it was learned, has no intention of acceding to the demand of Senator Caraway, of Arkansas, that George W. Wickersham be asked to resign as chairman of the National Crime Commission because of the letter.

The president has complete confidence in Wickersham and in the commission. He feels that it has an important task to perform, and he proposes to keep hands off until it has completed that task.

Caraway contended that Wickersham's letter to the governors' conference in New London, Conn., had given "encouragement to the criminal world" and was a "blow" to prohibition. The usefulness of the commission, he declared, already is destroyed if Wickersham continues as its head

The order issued by Doran yesterday is regarded as a move to protect the

HOOVER PLANS TO TAKE HAND IN TARIFF FIGHT

ACTS AGAINST POLICY OF NONINTERFERENCE

Few Democrats, It Is Said, Have Sought Raises on Farm Goods.

HIS ATTITUDE TOWARD BILL IS PUT IN DOUBT

President's Move Is Regarded as Placing Him in Embarassing Position.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

President Hoover has directed the Tariff Commission to give him a report of all Democratic members of the House and Democratic senators who have made requests of it. Presumably, Mr. Hoover is preparing himself to get into the tariff fight.

The report, it is understood, will be ready in a week or ten days. So far as can be learned comparatively few Democrats have asked anything of the commission, at least increases, and in the instances in which they did the increase was sought on agricultural products.

The President's request, however, caused considerable surprise. It can not be, it is pointed out, that he has in mind reviewing the cases in which the Democrats have been turned down with a view to reversing the action of his predecessor.

His Action Surprising.

"The conclusion must be that he is arming himself for the tariff fight, that he intends to use the information himself or plans to turn it over to the administration senators.

His action is surprising, in the first place, in that it conflicts with the announced policy of not interfering with legislation and, in the second and far more important place, in that it raises the serious question of his attitude on the pending bill. Mr. Hoover has been represented several times as being decidedly against the bill as it passed the House; as being in a mood, in fact, to veto it if not modified by the Senate.

Because of these representations, the impression has developed that he is really more in sympathy with the Democratic-Progressive alliance in the tariff fight than with the so-called administration regulars. There has never been anything definite, however, upon which this impression might be based or anything tangible upon which the representations that he was strongly opposed to the House bill might be based.

The fact that he has asked the Tariff Commission for data which presumably he wants to use against the Democrats would seem to indicate that the be-

GIRL PLUNGES TO DEATH FROM BRIDGE BECAUSE OF JEALOUSY IN LOVE

Car Sinks in Swollen Creek; Morris Gest Escapes.

Denver, Colo., July 18 (A.P.).—Thirteen bodies had been given up tonight by the flood-swelled arroyo that courses through the tableland three miles west of Stratton, Colo., as the known toll of lives occasioned by the collapse of a trestle bridge at 4 o'clock this morning on the main line of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad. The arroyo bed, normally dry, had been suddenly turned into a swirling, raging torrent by a wall of water from a cloudburst last night.

Rescue crews reported that all of the bodies recovered were taken from the creek bed during the day by workers who frantically searched the wreckage of an all-steel Pullman that was hurled into the water from the crack Western passenger train, No. 5, bound from St. Louis for Colorado Springs and the Pacific Coast.

That additional bodies may be recovered before the wreckage finally is cleared away, was the opinion of rescue workers and railroad officials, who tonight were directing relief operations.

All of those who lost their lives were in the all-steel Pullman, placed on the train at St. Louis. The car, submerged throughout the entire day on the bed

New London, Conn., July 18 (A.P.).—The twenty-first annual convention of governors disbanded tonight without a formal expression of opinion on the overshadowing issue brought before it—prohibition—but with most of its members on record with their separate ideas as to prohibition and the manner of its enforcement.

Leading those who believe modification to be the best solution of what all admitted was a pressing problem, was Gov. Albert C. Pilot Dies Trying To Refuel Plane

Hose From Supply Ship Fouls in Wing; Attempting to Set New Record.

Des Moines, Iowa, July 18 (A.P.).—Pilot Ross Arnold was killed late today when he fell from the cockpit of the plane Greater Des Moines just before it crashed in an attempt to make a refueling contact. The Greater Des Moines was making tests in preparation for an attempt to break the world's refueling endurance flight record.

Charles Gatchet, co-pilot, escaped in a parachute. The refueling hose from the Miss Sioux City became entangled in a wing of the Greater Des Moines causing it to tip badly. Arnold was in the rear cockpit and slipped down through the propeller, falling about 2,000 feet.

MAPP TRAINS GUNS ON VIRGINIA'S G.O.P.

Candidate Calls on His Party to Forget Dissensions in State Fight.

HAMMERS SHORT BALLOT

Special to The Washington Post.

Roanoke, Va., July 18.—While directing the bulk of his argument to an attack on the Republican party in Virginia, G. Walter Mapp, candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor of this State, in an address delivered over the radio here tonight took a few pot shots at the Byrd centralization program during the course of a eulogy on the Democratic record.

He urged that the dissension of the last national political campaign be forgotten and that Democrats of the State unite to defeat the Republicans.

"The causes for our party troubles were national, not State, and are now behind us," he said. "I earnestly urge all Democrats, Smith and anti-Smith alike, to participate in the party primary and to elect the primary's nominee. It would, in my judgment, be a calamity for Virginia, after a half century of clean, successful and efficient administration of her public affairs by the Democratic party, to be turned over to the Republican party."

After admitting his support of the Byrd revision program with regard to better schools, good roads on the pay-as-you-go basis, and a reduction in the gasoline tax, Mapp declared that he was not in accord with the reorganization acts and "the commission-made constitution," adopted June 19, 1928, increasing the governor's power.

The next governor of the State, Mapp said, will "have the right to hire and fire" at his pleasure. Major appointments that will be directly in the State executive's hands, he explained, will total 25,376, while the grand total will number 31,976.

Of the $40,209,332 authorized for expenditure by the commonwealth for the year ended February 28, 1929, the departments whose heads are now appointed by, or under the control of the governor, expend in excess of $37,500,-

Letter Calls Cannon Hoarder of War Food

Flour Purchase and Sale, Admitted in Explanatory Statement From Bishop, Is Scored by Report Made to Senator Glass.

Richmond, July 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Bishop James Cannon, jr., is now charged with hoarding food while others were winning the war. An authentic copy of the opinion, written by R. W. Boyden, chief enforcement officer of the Food Administration, and approved by President Hoover, then Food Administrator, denounced the bishop's wartime speculation in flour as both illegal and immoral. Boyden, a prominent Boston lawyer, was an unofficial representative of the United States on the reparations commission after the war.

The Boyden opinion was written June 6, 1918, in response to a request by Senator Carter Glass, then a member of the House. June 1, 1919, Glass, learning that the bishop had purchased 650 barrels of flour shortly before the food administration law became effective, August 10, 1917, asked Hoover for an opinion on the "legal and moral" aspects of the transaction.

The transaction was brought to the attention of Glass by a friend, who exhibited a letter in which the bishop, seeking to allay gossip throughout Virginia that he was a food profiteer, admitted he had purchased 650 barrels of flour with his own money in the name of the Blackstone Female Institute, a Methodist college at Blackstone, Va., of which he was president.

The bishop's contention in the letter was that he bought the flour to protect the college against a possible shortage, but he did not explain what sudden developments occurred in the situation making it safe for him to sell the flour within a few weeks after the purchase.

In the letter the bishop insisted that the purchase was made with the knowledge of the trustees of Blackstone Institute under an agreement that any loss sustained in the deal would be borne by him and any profits accruing would be retained by him as reimbursement for advances he asserted had been made from his funds in behalf of the institution.

Hoover wrote Glass that he had referred his letter to Boyden. The latter wrote:

"The man is clearly a hoarder under the terms of sections 6 and 7 of the food act, because he held flour 'in a quantity in excess of his reasonable requirements for use or consumption by himself and dependents for a reasonable time.' Even if we assume that he really bought the flour for the benefit of the college, he is still a hoarder, for he held enough for three years' supply for the college.

Held to Deprive Others.

"He is, by so doing, depriving some portion of the community of its fair share of a scarce food product. The better educated a man is the more clearly he ought to see this moral principle. I am unable to persuade myself that a college has any special claim for consideration."

How much the bishop paid for the flour, how much, if anything, in profits he clared, and the exact dates of the transaction could not be learned. Because the purchase was made just before the food law became effective, that law, which provided a penalty of

14 Women Face Bootlegging Counts as Dry Drive Opens

75 Per Cent of Liquor Sales in Arkansas Made by Fair Sex, Deputy Administrator Declares, After Undercover Agents Report.

Texarkana, Ark., July 18 (A.P.).—After arresting fourteen women in Miller County on liquor charges, S. M. Gurley, deputy prohibition administrator for western Arkansas, asserted today that "75 per cent of the bootlegging in the State is being carried on by women," and that the drive on them had just started.

The fourteen—seven white and seven negroes—and six men were caught in a series of raids which Gurley said resulted from the activities of undercover agents who have been working in this section for two months.

"The days of Southern chivalry are over so far as women violators of the prohibition law are concerned," Gurley announced. "We have been carrying on under cover work in southern Arkansas for some time and before we are through hundreds of women are going to find themselves facing a Federal judge.

"In the past prohibition officials, especially in the South, have been inclined to look askance at the women liquor vender because Federal judges have not favored sending them to such institutions at Atlanta and Leavenworth Prisons. Now, with the new prison for women at Alderson, W. Va., the situation is changed entirely.

"Our raiders have been given instructions to be hard-boiled."

Gurley said he had data to prove that 50 per cent of the women engaged in selling liquor in Arkansas were doing so as agents for their husbands or men friends.

Most of the raids, which started yesterday, were made in Texarkana. Those arrested were arraigned today and most of them released under bonds.

Presidential Dictatorship Being Forced, Says Coolidge

Fanatical Minority Organizations Intimidating Congress, Leave Chief Executive Alone to Champion Rights of Masses, He Writes in Magazine Article.

New York, July 18 (A.P.). — Calvin Coolidge, in an article in the August issue of the American Magazine, intimated that fanatical minority organizations with powerful machinery for the intimidation of representatives, gradually are driving the Presidents of the United States to virtual dictatorship.

"Fearful of the consequence of displeasing these highly organized groups, the former President writes, "congressmen often refuse to take a stand even upon party platform issues, and the President is forced to assume the entire responsibility." The result, he says, is the weakening of the power of political parties and the loss of confidence in Congress and the corresponding growth of presidential power.

"The President is not only head of the Government, but head of the party, and when congressmen are forced to deviate from party platfor missues the political system of the country suffers. However, the President's growing role of champion of the people is not dangerous," he contends, "but is the result of the Chief Executive being held solely responsible for his own acts, while in Congress, where responsibility is divided, there is much greater danger of arbitrary action.

"It has, therefore, become increasingly imperative that the President should resist any encroachment upon his constitutional powers," he concludes.

"You'll Never See Me Again," She Tells Friends at Dance.

GRIEVED BY ESCORT'S LACK OF ATTENTION

BODY IS IDENTIFIED BY HER LANDLADY.

Ella Virginia Hudnall Left Him Early in Night, Salesman Says.

"You'll never see me again."

With that declaration, Ella Virginia Hudnall, pretty 19-year-old blonde telephone operator, made a dramatic exit from the dance hall at Chevy Chase Lake, and the next her companion say they heard of her was when the body of the young girl, who died in a plunge off the Key Bridge early yesterday morning, was identified as that of Miss Hudnall by Mrs. Mae Yost, with whom the girl had boarded for the past year at 707 Tenth street northeast.

Miss Hudnall left the dance hall, according to a girl friend who was with her at the time, in high rage because her escort, Rudolph Cole, young carpet-cleaner salesman, of 1367 Meridian place northwest, had danced too frequently with a red-haired rival.

Cole Is Questioned.

Cole was questioned at length last night as to his knowledge of circumstances surrounding the girl's death by Lieut. Warren Embery, of the Homicide Bureau, but was later released to appear this morning at the District Morgue when an inquest is to be conducted by Dr. Joseph D. Rogers, assistant coroner.

Before being questioned by the police Cole was interviewed at his office by a reporter for The Post. At that time he at first evaded questions regarding his acquaintance with Miss Hudnall, and insisted that it would have been impossible for him to have had any part in her death, for the reason that he had gone to work at 21 minutes past midnight yesterday morning, whereas it was shortly after 1 o'clock when the girl's death occurred.

Separated, Says Cole.

According to the police, Cole told them he had met Miss Hudnall early Wednesday evening at the Lincoln telephone exchange, where she had been employed as an operator since February 28, 1927, and that the pair had gone together to Chevy Chase Park. There, he declared, they quarreled and separated, the girl leaving to return home alone. That was the last time he saw her, he declared.

Various persons who saw Miss Hudnall a few moments before her death, however, declared that they had seen her on the bridge with a well-dressed young man and that the two were obviously quarreling. Who this man may have been is one of the questions the police now are seeking to solve.

Alarmed because Miss Hudnall had not been home all night, and believing that descriptions of the bridge tragedy victim fitted her boarder, Mrs. Yost had telephoned to the dead girl's sister, Miss Irene Hudnall, bookkeeper for a large department store here, and together the two had gone to the District Morgue.

Before he was questioned by the police, Cole was interviewed in his office by a reporter for The Post. At that time he evaded questions regarding his acquaintance with the girl, but insisted that he could not possibly have been in her company at the time she jumped, fell or was thrown from the bridge because he declared he had gone to work at "21 minutes past 12," or almost an hour before the tragedy.

Friend Tells of Quarrel.

According to a girl friend of Miss Hudnall with whom she spent a part

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States of Wednesday evening, the pair had been together at Chevy Chase Lake, until Miss Hudnall had "flown into a rage" because Cole had danced with a red-haired girl who "was poison to Ella."

Despite Miss Hudnall's protests, the girl friend said Cole had continued to dance with her titian rival, and he and Miss Hudnall had then engaged in a violent argument. When Cole again escorted the red-headed girl out on the dance floor, Miss Hudnall dashed out of the hall, shouting, "'You'll never see me again," according to her friend.

Cole, she declared, was dancing at that moment and apparently did not know Miss Hudnall had left. The girl friend ran after her in an attempt to bring her back, but before she could reach her, Miss Hudnall had gone.

But a few minutes later, Cole, learning that Miss Hudnall had gone, had himself left the park, it is stated.

Cole and the dead girl, according to their friends, had been keeping company steadily for several months until a few weeks ago, when they apparently had broken off their friendship. As one acquaintance stated, "they certainly cooled down toward each other," but during the last few days apparently were endeavoring to patch up the breach, although Cole had by no means become as frequent a visitor as previously.

Dr. Nevitt stated he examined the body, but could find no marks of violence. He declined to issue a certificate in the case pending completion of the police investigation.

The tragedy occurred shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday morning. Accompanied by a young man, the girl was seen to alight from a street car at Thirty-fourth and M streets northwest and start across the bridge. It was evident, according to police, from their manner that the couple were quarreling.

Patrolman William E. Lawson, of the Seventh Precinct, stated he heard a woman's screams a short time later, but thought it was the cry of a reveler and paid no heed.

George Stuart, 21 years old, of Clarendon, Va., who was paddling near the bridge in a canoe, heard the screams and the report of a body striking the water, he told police. He sped to the spot and attempted to rescue the young woman, but reported that she fought him off and disappeared beneath the water.

The body was found by Stuart, Lawson and a group of searchers almost an hour later, floating in the river near Analostan Island. The body was taken to the morgue, where it remained unidentified for 15 hours until the appearance of Mrs. Yost.

According to her friends, Miss Hudnall was "rated as an exceptionally fine dancer" and spent most of her evenings dancing.

Sister Tried Suicide.

Miss Hudnall is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hudnall, of 513 Poplar avenue, Clarendon, Va.; five sisters, Mrs. Mary Spillman, a nurse at St. Elizabeths Hospital, and who lives at 3010 Nichols avenue southeast; Mrs. Elizabeth Lynn, of North Carolina; Mrs. Linden L. Martin, of 2114 G street northwest; Irene Hudnall, of 1406 S street southeast, and Georgia Hudnall, of 3010 Nichols avenue, and one brother, John, of Baltimore.

One June 23 of this year, Georgia Hudnall attempted suicide by swallowing poison after learning that Raymond M. Hilton, 24 years old, of 1835 A street southeast, with whom she was in love, was already married. Four days later, on June 27, Hilton was arrested on a Maryland warrant charging bigamy, police asserting that he already had three wives living, having married the third at Rockville, Md., on May 24.

Lieut. Harry Lohman, acting commander of the Seventh Precinct, stated last night that he intends to call upon Patrolman William E. Lawson for an explanation of reports regarding his conduct in connection with the drowning of Miss Hudnall.

DRYS RAID CONVENT; DOOR IS SMASHED IN

OFFICERS FIND NO LIQUOR

Los Angeles, July 18 (A.P.).—A "tip" passed by a constable to the vice squad of the district attorney's office here which resulted in a liquor raid last June 13, of a Roman Catholic convent in Belvedere, a suburb, today had caused two investigations and attempts to institute two more.

The raiding squad, led by Sergt. O. L. Childers, broke down a door when nuns refused to admit the officers, but no liquor was found. News of the incident became known yesterday when District Attorney Buron Fitts demanded that officers obtain a warrant before searching private residences in the future.

Childers, who did not carry a warrant for the search, blamed the error on Harry Tucker, a Belvedere constable. Tucker said he had received a tip that a still and liquor were in the vicinity of the convent and W. T. Overholt, chief of the Belvedere constabulary, started an inquiry into the source of Tucker's information.

Considers Dismissing Six.

Meanwhile Fitts said he had begun an investigation of the raid and was considering the dismissal of six members of his vice squad participating in it. Their names were kept secret.

Bishop J. J. Cantwell, of the diocese of Los Angeles and San Diego, although exonerating Fitts' office of any blame sent a formal protest to U. S. Senator Hiram Johnson, of California.

Isidore Dockweiler, wealthy Catholic layman, has demanded a grand jury investigation of the affair, and expressed the opinion that some one had attempted to embarrass the district attorney's office.

Their Explanations Differ.

Explanations of the raid by Tucker and Childers differed. Tucker declared some unidentified physician informed him that Mexicans were operating a still and he telephoned the vice squad, giving them a street but no number. The constable said he made no direct mention of a convent, and was unable to explain how the vice squad happened to suspect the cloister. He did not explain why he disregarded the usual routine and notified the vice squad rather than his own chief.

Childers' men insisted Tucker gave them an exact address. They said the convent was approached about 4 a. m., but that they had no knowledge that they were attempting to raid church property and, unable to understand the protests of the nuns, spoken in Spanish, broke down the door, but apologized and paid for the damage out of their own pockets when they discovered their error.

No report of the raid was made to Fitts, it was claimed, and not until a letter from a Catholic clergyman here to a friend in Wichita, Kan., telling of the raid, had fallen into possession of a newspaper did the affair come to the district attorney's attention.

Smashing a rear window of the grocery establishment of Borris Brill, 9 N street northwest, early yesterday, thieves looted the cash register of $7 and also stole two hams, valued at $7, from the ice box, before escaping.

OHIO RIVER STEAMERS STAGE THRILLING RACE

THREE DIE, 20 HURT IN ALUMINUM BLAST

Sifter Building Is Wrecked; Workmen's Clothes Are Burned Away.

CAUSE TERMED MYSTERY

New Kensington, Pa., July 18 (A.P.).—Three men were reported dead and twenty injured in hospitals tonight after an explosion in the bronze powder plant of the Aluminum Co. of America works at Logan Ferry, near here. The blast occurred in the "sifter" building, which was wrecked, and the entire countryside felt the force of the explosion.

Ambulances carrying doctors and nurses from hospitals in New Kensington and Parnassus, nearby towns, were sent to the plant to care for the injured. Some of the workmen were carried from the shattered building with practically all their clothes burned away. Those in the hospital were said to have suffered mostly from burns.

After the explosion company officials said the aluminum powder took fire, with the flames being confined largely to the powder because the plant is constructed of galvanized iron. Buildings connected with the "sifter" house also were damaged by the explosion, origin of which was undetermined by company attaches.

One hundred men were at work in the works when the blast occurred.

HOOVER PLANS TAKING HAND IN TARIFF FIGHT

lief regarding his attitude has been ill-founded.

Has Asked Limited Revision.

He has in public utterances called for a limited revision, but the question is now, of course, just how limited the revision should be. It has gotten down to the matter of individual rates. The House still insists it passed a limited revision bill and the Senate finance committee will insist that it is a limited revision that it plans to make. The indications are, in fact, that the committee will really modify the House bill to some extent or give the impression of a modification at least. But no one believes that the bill to be reported will satisfy the coalition. It would probably be impossible for it to satisfy the Democrats, but the Progressives can be satisfied by holding the revision to agricultural products. Nobody believes that this will be done.

It may be that Mr. Hoover has reached an agreement with the Senate regulars as to what the finance committee bill will be and, having done this, is preparing to help them protect the bill. It is recalled, in this connection, that Senator Watson, majority leader, and Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, did not appear crestfallen after their conference with the President a few days ago. Senator Watson did say that certain modifications had to be made in the House bill before it could be passed, but the impression was at the time that he told Mr. Hoover this, instead of his having agreed to it after a conference with Mr. Hoover.

Unlike Those of Borah.

But the tariff views of Senators Watson and Reed, even what they would call modified views, are not those of Senator Borah or the agricultural bloc, for example. It is hard, too, to reconcile them with what one would expect to be Mr. Hoover's views.

There is reason to believe, though, that an agreement has been reached. It may not be that Mr. Hoover has gotten what he wants; it is, in fact, decidedly unlikely that he did. But perhaps the regulars have succeeded in impressing upon him just what their Republican constituents expect of them, how embarrassing it would be not to grant certain increases, and that Mr. Hoover agreed to a broadening of his tariff views.

He was really in an embarrassing position. The regulars were prepared, immediately he vetoed their plans, to say: "I told you so. I told you he wasn't a good Republican."

And should he have gone to the extreme of aligning himself with the coalition he would have never heard the last of it.

And another thing, the feature of the tariff bill that most appeals to him, in which he is most interested, is the provision extending virtual unlimited tariff-making authority to him. He would like to get this under his wing as he did the farm board with a view to getting it out of "politics" too. But the coalition is to wage its strongest fight against the delegation of this authority. Even such a stalwart as Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, is to fight it. It is doubtful if the delegation will be made.

Ludlow Addresses Military Campers

Congress Very Responsive in C. M. T. C. Matters, Says Representative.

Representative Louis Ludlow, of Indiana, a former Washington newspaper correspondent, told C. M. T. C. student soldiers and the Third Cavalry yesterday at Fort Myer in a review that Congress had an abiding interest in the training of the Nation's citizenry for national defense.

"Congress is sometimes accused unjustly, I think, of a niggardly attitude toward the C. M. T. C.," he declared. "I have taken pains to have figures compiled from the records of the War Department which show conclusively, I think, that considering the novelty of the experiment and the time it requires to mold public sentiment into acquiescence with anything that bears a military name, Congress has been truly responsive. For the fiscal year 1930, which began on July 1, the appropriation is $2,742,158, and the enrollment is 37,500."

Announcement was made at Fort Myer that M. R. Pool, 5410 Thirteenth street northwest, has been named a student noncommissioned officer of the Third Cavalry in recognition of his strict attention to duty and aptitude in studies.

Rev. Jernagin Elected Colored Baptists' Head

The Rev. W. H. Jernagin was elected president of the Colored Baptist Association of Washington and vicinity yesterday afternoon at the first annual session in the Second Baptist Church, Third street, between H and I, northwest. Other officers chosen are; the Rev. A. J. Tyler, first vice president; the Rev. Aquila Sayles, second vice president; the Rev. W. A. Taylor, third vice president; Dr. J. J. Porter, fourth vice president; William G. Opey, secretary; J. W. Williamson, assistant secretary; the Rev. J. Harvey Randolph, corresponding secretary; B. Andros Judkins, treasurer.

The convention, which will close today, was addressed yesterday by several visiting ministers and laymen. Morning, afternoon and evening sessions were held.

Suit Alleges Plaintiff Was Slandered in Greek

Services of a qualified interpreter of the Greek language may be required in District Supreme Court in the near future as the result of a suit filed yesterday.

Alexandros Pappas, of 900 Spring road northwest, plaintiff in the action which is brought against Peter Garoufes, of 2900 Eleventh street northwest, alleges that he was slandered by the latter in the Greek language, and in the presence of persons who understood what was said. Pappas, a former clerk employed by Garoufes, declares that the latter said Pappas stole $20 from the cash drawer, and that he has lost friends and has suffered humiliation and mortification as a result.

Redress in the sum of $10,000 is sought. The declaration was filed through Attorney Leonard A. Block.

FINANCIAL ANXIETY EASED IN FLORIDA

ONE MORE FAILURE LISTED

Tampa, Fla., July 18 (A.P.).—Traces of anxiety in the minds of Floridans, following the close of fifteen banks in the State yesterday, apparently had disappeared tonight.

Although one other small bank closed its doors today, public sentiment apparently had been bolstered up by statements from State and Government bank officials that plenty of money was on hand and that the depositors need have no further fear for the safety of their accounts.

A large force of bank examiners went about the task of checking accounts of the various defunct institutions whose aggregate deposits totaled approximately $22,500,000 with the hope of bringing about a liquidation as quickly as possible.

Considerable encouragment to Floridians in general was obtained, banking officials said, in the announcement from Washington that Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chief of the Department of Agriculture's plant quarantine and control board, had hope for a modification of the Florida Mediterranean fruit fly quarantine by the October shipping season.

State banking officials had said the presence of the Mediterranean fruit fly in the State, with the resultant reduction in production and shipment of fruits and vegetables necessitated by the imposition of a quarantine, had been an important factor in the general economic depression throughout Florida.

The small bank which closed today was the State bank at Bowling Green. It listed capital stock at $34,000; deposits at $300,000 and assets at $425,000.

From his office at the State capitol in Tallahasse, Comptroller Ernest Amos declared he felt no grave alarm over the banking conditions in Florida.

Colorful Parade Marks St. Gabriel's Carnival

A colorful parade was the feature of the carnival being held at St. Gabriel's Church, on Grant Circle, last night. Led by the Victory Post, American Legion, the fife and drum corps, and the Boys Independent Band, the marchers walked around the vicinity of the circle and back to the carnival grounds.

Tonight is bargain night on the carnival grounds, while tomorrow night a surprise entitled "The End of the Rainbow," is scheduled to wind up the attraction.

Washington Man Wins Honor at Training Camp

On the eve of Gov. Harry F. Byrd's proposed visit today to Fort Eustis, Va., the Citizens' Military Training Camp there announced that the foremost honors of the week among the first-year student soldiers had been awarded to a Washington man, Corp. W. W. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Lee Smith, of 2908 Seventeenth street northeast. He is a color guard.

The best advanced course C. M. T. C. student for the week was adjudged to be Sergt. Edward F. Butler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Butler, of Alexandria, Va. The honor accords him the duty of bearing the colors. Gov. Byrd is to be accompanied to the camp by Col. L. W. H. Peyton, civilian aide from Virginia to the Secretary of War, and Col. Williard D. Newbill, assistant adjutant general of Virginia.

MAPP LAUNCHES HOT ATTACK ON REPUBLICANS IN VIRGINIA

000, Mapp stated, "thus giving the governor, besides his power of recommendation under the budget and a two-thirds veto power on every budget item, the direction and control of the expenditure of approximately 95 cents out of every dollar of the public revenue."

"I submit that these facts and figures make further argument on the question of too great centralization of our Government in one man's hands, however able, patriotic or exalted he may be, unnecessary.

"In my judgment this whole centralization trend is contrary to the splendid, progressive history of our State, and is in conflict with the principles of our party. The short-ballot amendments, taking from the people the rights of electing their important State officials, and vesting the power of their appointment in the governor is Hamiltonian in thought not Jeffersonian and may prove injurious in practice. By the short ballot we are taking a short route to one-man rule in Virginia. Autocracy is just around the corner.

Calls Parallel Unsafe.

"All this has been done on the theory that our State government is like a big corporation whose chief executive should have almost unlimited powers.

"The parallel between a State government and a big business corporation is neither sound nor safe. While in theory on paper such a set-up of our government may appeal to theorists in government, or to 'big business,' men familiar with governmental operations recognize large governmental powers, administered by practical men, hold out great temptations to abuse, and are fraught with great dangers to the people. The millenium in politics in Virginia and in America is yet a long way off.

"But our friends, the Republicans, can get no comfort or consolation out of the situation. The new constitution, carrying with it the short-ballot amendments, was not a Democratic measure, and was never approved by the Democratic party, as such. It was adopted by a combination of Democratic and Republican voters and supporters.

"Indeed, an analysis of the vote by which it was ratified will show that the Democratic sections of Virginia voted by large majorities against the adoption of the amendments, while in the two districts in which the Republican strength in the State centers, now represented in Congress by Republicans, the majorities were so overwhelming as to overcome, in one instance by the small margin of 2,849 votes, the negative Democratic votes against these undemocratic short-ballot amendments.

Sees Republican Strategy.

"The conclusion is irresistible that under the leadership of the able chairman of the Republican party the Republicans supported these short-ballot amendments, and then, using them as a club, turned about and beat their Democratic allies in the November congressional election.

"Some of my Democratic friends have sought to eliminate this question of centralization from discussion in the present primary campaign, but the question has got to be met, one time or another, in Virginia, and it had as well be done now, dispassionately, in an intraparty contest, as later in the heat of an interparty fight.

"The Democratic party is the party of the people. It trusts the people, believes in the people, and always has stood for the largest possible participation of the masses in the selection of their officials and in the control of their government.

"I will say to our anti-Smith friends, who at Roanoke declared against centralization of our government and characterized the short ballot as a backward step in government, that they need not leave the Democratic party for this reason, because Democracy itself is going to restore to the people the rights of franchise, unwisely, in my judgment, taken from them.

"And likewise to the Republicans who, in convention in Richmond, declared themselves in strong terms against centralization of government, including the short ballot amendments, let me say that I am prepared to meet them, or their accredited coalition leader, on this issue, and fight it out at Phillipi.

"Three of us are contesting for the high privilege of leading the Democratic hosts in the party's first real challenge to supremacy in a State election since Mahone and Mahonism went down in defeat before the onslaught of Phil McKinney in 1889. To make the choice of the east a real choice, the western portion of the State, particularly the fighting Ninth, the glorious Mountain Empire, with its efficient party machinery, should not be organized for or against any one of the three candidates, all of whom are tried Democrats, with honorable Democratic records back of them, but all should be given a fair field without favors.

Party Success Important.

"This, all of us have a right to expect; less than this is not in accord with Democratic principles of popular government.

"Party success is vastly more important to Virginia and her future than the personal aggrandizement or gratification of any individual group.

"In the last analysis a disinterested electorate, in the political confusion of the hour, should select that candidate most available to harmonizing and reuniting the party and to lead Democracy to a triumphant victory in November.

"Four years ago, when I was before the people, the nomination meant an easy election. This year, let no one deceive himself, or you; the nominee, whoever he may be, faces a real fight against our coalition enemies.

"If either of my distinguished primary competitors is selected, he may rest assured of my most vigorous support, by voice and vote.

"If I am named the standard-bearer on August 6, I shall carry the banner of our great party, the party of my faith and of my fathers, with every confidence of a glorious victory on November 5.

"And having won, I pledge the people of Virginia, without regard to factions or parties, a continuation of the splendid program already so finely begun, giving to Virginia and Virginians a progressive, equitable and enlightened government, economically administered."

GOVERNORS END CONFERENCE WITHOUT VOTE ON DRY LAW

Carolina, respectively, and Byrd, of Virginia.

Gov. Richards sounded the warning to his party that "if it ever again nominated a man who is against prohibition" it will meet its doom. He did not mention former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York by name, but no one mistook the reference to be other than to the leader of the party in the last presidential campaign.

The South Carolina Governor predicted that President Hoover would go down in history as "the greatest President the United States ever had" because of his "apparent dry attitude."

The prohibition question was brought into the conference Tuesday by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York when he read a letter from George W. Wickersham, head of President Hoover's recently formed law enforcement commission. In the letter Mr. Wickersham urged cooperation between State and Federal Governments looking toward better enforcement.

Although efforts were made by dry leaders to have the conference pass resolutions approving the reforms suggested by Mr. Wickersham the majority sided with the executive committee which ruled it was the policy of the conference not to go on record on controversial subjects.

The decision was taken following a stormy session around the round table in the course of which Governor Ritchie stated that if States choose not to enforce prohibition statutes "they violate no legal or moral obligation."

There is no crime wave, he said, save that which follows in prohibition's wake and he cited statistics of the city of Baltimore to show that where city and State authorities do not attempt to enforce Federal laws, leaving their courts free to handle the more commonly accepted definition of criminal cases, crime is on the decrease.

To this Gov. Richards took sharp exception, saying that "unless prohibition is more stringently enforced this terrible wave of criminality will not be stopped."

The South Carolina Governor demanded that the governors, "who are at least supposed to defend the morals of the country," make a statement approving the idea of better prohibition enforcement.

Govs. Graves of Alabama, Reed of Kansas, Conley of West Virginia and Hammill of Iowa were among others who spoke in defense of prohibition, although they were not unanimous in the view that a division of authority between State and Federal forces would lead to better enforcement.

"If before all the States have the proper machinery to enforce the act the Government relaxes its work, there is danger of chaos," Gov. Reed said.

At the closing session today Gov. George H. Dern of Utah was reelected chairman of the executive committee of the conference, Gov. Theodore Christianson of Minnesota was renamed treasurer and former Gov. Carey Hardee of Florida was reelected secretary.

Salt Lake City, Utah, was selected for the 1930 conference, the date to be decided later.

Gov. Roosevelt has named a committee of one to collect data on crime and Gov. Christianson of Minnesota, was constituted a committee to collect statistics on national and State banking taxation.

CAPITAL MINIMIZES CHINESE WAR PERIL

Hoover and Stimson Taking Keen Interest in Row in Far East.

BORAH WATCHES, SILENT

An amicable settlement of the Sino-Soviet situation, which has grown out of China's seizure of the Chinese Eastern Railway and resulted in the severance by the Soviet of diplomatic relations between the two countries, was looked for last night by diplomatic circles of the Capitol.

The action of the Soviet in severing relations was received with mild surprise here and while this was regarded as the most grave phase of the recent developments, serious overt acts or a declaration of war were considered improbable both from a military and political viewpoint.

Outstanding dangers in the present status of the situation, observers tonight said, were the possibility of frontier clashes or the entry of border troops of one nation into the territory of the other. While the latter now would be considered an act of war, even such a move would not be expected by observers here to result in grave conflicts. Beyond these possibilities, however, no large scale campaign was thought either likely or possible.

Hoover Interested.

Both President Hoover, who has spent considerable time in China, and Secretary Stimson, who has dealt intimately with Far Eastern affairs for a number of years, are taking a keen interest in all developments. Official dispatches to the State department from the American legation in Peiping and the American consulate in Harbin, which is in the center of the affected territory, are scanty.

John Van A. MacMurray, American Minister in China, who has been granted leave to return to the United States for personal reasons, will be requested by Secretary Stimson to remain at his post in Peiping if the situation takes a serious turn. Secretary Stimson said yesterday that he has so far not requested MacMurray to remain in China, nor has the Minister suggested yet that he forego his trip home.

Chairman Borah, of the Senate foreign relations committee, is displaying keen interest in the developments, and noted yesterday that war between Russia and China would have far-reaching international consequences. Not only would the millions of peoples of the two countries be involved, but Great Britain, Japan, France and Germany would have an interest in the region where troops now are being concentrated.

Silent on U. S. Attitude.

Borah remained silent, as he has done since the controversy began, as to the attitude the United States might assume. He indicated a belief, however, that this country might take a moral interest should war develop.

There are approximately 75 Americans in Harbin and in the territory adjacent to the Chinese Eastern Railway. Those who are in outlying districts now are moing into Harbin as a precautionary measure. Officials tonight assumed that the American consular officers would take it upon themselves to warn American citizens to remain out of all districts where trouble might arise.

Enraged Zebras Attack Keeper in Toledo's Zoo

Toledo, Ohio, July 18 (A.P.).—Two enraged zebras attacked Charles Conner, 50, keeper of the herbivora house at the zoo here today and perhaps fatally injured him.

A stallion zebra, biting and lashing his hoofs, knocked the keeper to the ground in a runway. The animal's mate joined in the attack. Attendants, hearing Conner's cries, drove the zebras into a corner while he was carried out. His left arm was broken in two places, one ear nearly chewed off, and his head and face badly cut in addition to possible severe internal injuries.

They Call It Politics

By CARTER FIELD

ONE of the unfathomable mysteries of politics is the extraordinary zeal and self-righteousness of college professors when they enter it. They have no "grays" in their collections of colors. Everything is either white or black.

"Lobbying" is a boiling subject at the moment, due to the fact that Congress is framing a new tariff bill, but the bitterest and most ex parte analysis of the situation the writer has happened to see or hear of is a pamphlet just off the press by Edward B. Logan, Ph. D., assistant professor of political science at the University of Pennsylvania.

While presumably dealing mostly with past events, most of the subjects discussed were either skillfully chosen to bear on present tariff battles, or else the coincidences were rather remarkable.

FOR instance, he brings out that Senator Charles Waterman, of Colorado, was general counsel of the Great Western Sugar Co. (repeatedly held up recently as the only beet sugar company that makes any money). It so happens that Colorado is one of the beet sugar States where the intereat is so widespread that Democrats elected from that State naturally expect to vote for a high tariff on sugar, and always do. The same might be said of Wyoming, where Senator Kendrick, a Democrat, votes for all the so-called Republican tariff schedules. Just what the difference really is between a Democrat and a Republican in those States is somewhat baffling to outsiders, but when the Democratic national committee sends orators in that country during campaigns they are cautioned as they come West not to attack the high tariff rates.

Senator Charles S. Thomas, who represented Colorado for two terms, and finally split with his party on the League of Nations issue, did not share this view that the Rocky Mountain democracy differed on the tariff from the Democrats of other sections. Dr. Logan quotes him from the World's Work of September, 1913, as saying: "I have been a U. S. senator only a few months, but the larger part of my time has been spent in warding off approaches and attacks of those public-spirited citizens who have been attempting to influence my acts as a senator by the ostentatious parade of a manufactured public sentiment."

DR. LOGAN also rakes up testimony of "the head of the beet sugar men" as saying he had maintained headquarters in Washington for 23 years and had fought Cuban reciprocity, the annexation of Hawaii, the Wilson tariff bill of 1894, the Dingley bill of 1897, and the Payne-Aldrich bill that admitted 300,000 tons of sugar free from the Philippines.

It did not occur to Dr. Logan apparently that surely there was not much for the public to worry about, as all these fights were unsuccessful!

"The Hawaiian cane sugar growers," he says, "maintained headquarters in Washington with a $10,000 a year secretary conducting activities."

"A daily sugar bulletin," Dr Logan continues, "was sent to members of Congress, members of the Cabinet and the President." This offender also flooded the country press with propaganda.

"In the election campaign in which Thomas was elected," Dr. Logan says, "h asserted that the beet sugar interests supported Waterman, general counsel for the Great Western Sugar Co."

No reference is made to the fact that when Thomas retired, years later, he refused a Democratic renomination for another reason entirely, and the voters of Colorado sent a high tariff Republican, Senator Phipps, in his place.

The whole point of the sugar phase of Dr. Logan's pamphlet seems to be to expose the fact that Senator Waterman was once general counsel for the largest of the beet sugar companies. His attempt to prove that the beet sugar interests of Colorado have tried to influence Congress continually in favor of a high tariff on sugar, exclusion of Philippine sugar, and, in fact, everything else that would serve their selfish interests, is carrying coals to Newcastle, for they shout it from the housetops.

DR. LOGAN makes no comment whatever on the activities of those who oppose raising the duty on sugar. Apparently he has not heard of the activities of the National City Bank, of New York, speaking for the Americans who have invested more than $1,000,000,000 in Cuba. It has not been brought to his attention that the soft drink bottlers and the confectioners have vigorously urged their views, both in Congress and in the press.

Which is very interesting, because he does not go into the merits of the sugar situation at all. He is merely discussing "lobbying."

He devotes nearly two printed pages to an attack on the Chemical Foundation for its lobbying and propaganda in an attempt to continue a dye embargo so as to build up an American industry. Just as in the sugar case, however, he does all his shooting in an ex parte manner. He makes no mention of the very skillful lobbying done by the dye importers in that fight.

Actually, the present battle of the propagandists and lobbyists on both sides of the sugar fight is a gorgeous spectacle, and it seems a pity to have the professor see only one side of the battle.

CHINESE CHIEFS MAP PLANS TO MEET RUSSIAN ADVANCE

avoided and thought the question probably would be discussed internationally, especially if Trans-Siberian traffic on the Chinese Eastern Railway should be suspended for some time or if the Chinese should be unable to maintain peace and order in Manchuria.

The American Legation, which was informed by the Associated Press of the rupture of relations, is closely watching the developments like representatives of other powers.

U. S. Envoys Plans Not Known.

American Minister John V. A. MacMurray was due to leave for the United States July 22. It was not known if he had decided to postpone his departure.

Moscow, U. S. S. R., July 18 (A.P.).—In consequence of its breaking off all relations with the Chinese Nationalist government, the Soviet government today suspended all railroad and steamship communication with China.

Traffic experts here tonight believed that Russia and China would suffer equally in loss of trade, passenger traffic and other advantages, but it was expected that Japan would reap considerable profit as the result of the rupture. Most international merchandise for the Chinese market is likely to go through Japanese ports instead of over the Chinese Eastern Railway lines through Manchuria.

Today's newspapers strongly condemn the Chinese reply to the first Soviet note, regarding it as evidence that the Chinese government "intends to continue its provocative policy toward the U. S. S. R."

Declares Charge Empty.

The official Soviet organ Izvestia declares Chinese charges of Soviet propaganda merely "empty charges by means of which the Chinese government is trying to evade giving a proper explanation of its unlawful action with regard to the Chinese Eastern Railway."

"The Soviet government," says Izvestia, "decided to break off relations only when it became impossible to tolerate the existing situation longer. The U. S. S. R. is aware that the breach for which the Chinese government is solely responsible, undermines the position not only of the ruling group but also to a certain extent the national elements in China in their struggle against unequal treaties.

Geneva, July 18 (A.P.).—The Russo-Chinese crisis is being followed with intense interest in League of Nations circles but at present there is no prospect of league intervention. In order for the league to interfere there must be an appeal by a member state and so far there has been no indication that this would be done.

Article 11 of the league covenant provides that in case of emergency the secretary general shall "on request of any member of the league" forthwith summon a meeting of the council.

Russia Not in League.

In the case of the dispute between Bolivia and Paraguay late last year the council was in session at the time and the question was placed on the agenda by general consent.

In the present crisis only one party to the dispute, China, is a member of the league. Such a case is provided for in article 17 of the covenant which provides that a nonmember state shall be invited to accept obligations of membership for the purpose of the settlement of a particular dispute upon such conditions as the council may deem just.

Should the nonmember state refuse to accept the obligations of membership and resort to war against a member of the league, then sanctions provided for in article 16 may be applied, the first being the severance of all trade and financial relations.

Should both parties to the dispute refuse to accept obligations of league membership it is provided that "the council may take such measures and make such recommendations as will prevent hostilities and result in a settlement of the dispute."

Dense Fog Balks Sverige In Flight to Labrador

Ivigtut, Greenland, July 18 (A.P.).—The Swedish airplane Sverige, which is attempting to reach New York from Stockholm with several intermediate stops, returned here today at 8 a. m. Eastern Standard time. Dense fog caused abandonment of the attempt to reach Labrador.

Capt. Albin Ahrenberg took off from here at 6:18 a. m. It was his second unsuccessful start in two days. Earlier leaky pontoons and bad weather had prolonged his stay. The Sverige on the first leg of its flight was forced down by motor trouble on the coast of Iceland short of Reykjavik, it goal. It was not able to continue to Greenland until a new motor had been sent from Germany.

U. S. SEEN AS RULER OF FRENCH LIBERTY

Deputy, Opposing Poincare Debt Plan, Warns of America's Wealth.

PREMIER TO SPEED VOTE

Paris, July 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A night session of the Chamber of Deputies was decided upon this afternoon in order to hasten to a definite conclusion the debate on ratification of France's war debt agreements with the United States and Great Britain.

It was announced that Premier Raymond Poincare, after two days' absence from the Chamber, will reappear in his seat at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. This was interpreted as a move by the government to force a vote on the Mellon-Berenger agreement before the end of this week.

The power of American wealth dominating France as well as the rest of Europe as year after year Europe pours gold into the American Treasury in war debt payments was pictured by Radical-Socialist Deputy Bergery, formerly secretary of the reparations commission, to a sweltering Chamber this afternoon.

An American financial hegemony—the hand of American investment in every corner of Europe—will cost Europe its political freedom; without a safeguard clause she will simply be handing over her liberty to America, he pleaded.

Not Unfriendly to U. S., He Says.

In one of the most powerful arguments against ratification without an explicit reservation permitting France to discontinue payments if Germany ceases her reparations payments to France, Bergery held the Chamber attentive through a long broiling afternoon. He said he did not wish to take an unfriendly attitude toward the United States, but that the inevitable consequences of the present economic system in America would push it to exercising political pressure on countries which owed it money. Bergery declared:

"The United States has renounced war as an instrument of national policy, but has not renounced gold as an instrument of international domination."

Premier Poincare, still feverish from the fatigue of his three-days plea for unconditional ratification of war debts and unable to come to the chamber again today, caused the speeches of the opposition to lose most of their political importance. During the long morning and afternoon sessions no attempt was made to get down to serious consideration of the burning question of how to ratify the war debt agreements and still record reservations in a manner which Washington would not regard as annulling ratification.

Today's speakers—Deputies Durand, Auriol, Grumbach, Bergery and former Premier Herriot, all from the radical parties—put in their time rehashing the past to prove that the war debt settlements might have been better.

Story of Ruhr Dragged in.

The whole story of the Ruhr occupation was dragged in, largely to refute Poincare's claim that it resulted in the creation of the Dawes plan and hence lead to the Young plan. Hours were consumed in efforts to show up the hollowness of this claim. Even Marshal Foch's name was dragged in. Deputy Charles Reibel produced letters which the late generalissimo of the allied forces wrote to President Doumergue and to himself to prove that Foch considered it advantageous to maintain military control to force financial payments.

Foreign Minister Aristide Briand intervened to cut short this "deplorable effort to set up the opinion of soldiers against that of civilians."

When the debate dragged on until evening without getting anywhere, Louis J. Malvy, president of the Finance Commission of the Chamber, insisted that the deputies hold a night sitting "if we are to get through this interminable discussion before America's war supplies bill comes due on August 1."

PLAN FOR JOINT CUT IN NAVAL BUILDING PROGRAMS FORECAST

negotiations to a point which will enable me to make an announcement before the house rises in a fortnight. But, as is known perfectly well, it isn't my opinion alone. When one is dealing with international affairs one isn't only dealing with the cabinet or departments, but with a very complicated set of circumstances. I am doing my best to expedite negotiations so that I hope to make an announcement before the house rises. If it is impossible, I hope the house will not ask me to tie my hands."

Need for Haste Cited.

Asked by Hore Belisha to make an announcement as soon as possible because it affects the livelihood of thousands in naval ports, MacDonald said that consideration is very fully in the minds of the government.

Churchill heads a party in the house which is against conceding numerical parity to the United States. It is in a minority. His questions today were designed to make sure that ships planned will not be cancelled without his group having a chance to protest in Parliament.

MacDonald cautiously avoided promising this and in informed circles it is not thought likely that he will be able to complete negotiations now in progress with Washington through Ambassador Dawes before the house adjourns for the summer holiday so that if big cuts are made in the naval program this is likely before the house meets in October and there will be no opportunity for organized Conservative protest.

Last year and the year before the Tory first lord of the admiralty, William Clive-Bridgeman, dropped ships from the building program without asking consent of Parliament, and the Labor cabinet relies on this precedent.

Twenty-two Ships Scheduled.

Ships already provided for to be laid down before March next year include two Washington cruisers, one flotilla leader, eight destroyers, six submarines, four sloops and one gunboat. It is understood it is the two cruisers that the government will offer to drop if the United States makes a reciprocal gesture. The submarines will be built, as Great Britain is trying to get other nations to build submarines before she curtails her marine program.

It is possible, though not certain, that some of the nine destroyers scheduled for next year are also subject to bargaining with Washington.

It is now clear for the first time what form Anglo-American naval negotiations are taking. The much advertised comparison of yardsticks, if this scheme ever proves practicable, will take place, it is hoped, in a more favorable atmosphere induced by agreed suspension of cruiser building. And MacDonald, unless the tories decide to press him more closely in commons, has served notice that if his discussions with Washington are not completed on this point when the house rises he proposes to go ahead. There is some reason to think that the premier would rather announce a partial naval holiday after the house rises than before then in order to prevent debate and criticism from the tories until autumn and perhaps until after his return from America.

No confirmation was obtainable last night at the White House or State Department of the report that Prime Minister MacDonald has proposed to cut the British naval building program at once if the United States will do the same.

It can be stated on authority that President Hoover favors actual and even drastic naval reduction and is prepared to match anything Mr. MacDonald may do in this direction. However, the President is somewhat hampered in that the law authorizing the construction of 15 additional 10,000-ton cruisers, while giving him power to suspend building, first requires that there shall be an international agreement.

The Navy Department recently awarded contracts for the construction of the first group of five of the fifteen cruisers, two going to private shipyards and three to navy yards. Money is available to begin work on the second group of five cruisers.

This does not mean that these vessels will be constructed. Months will pass before the first five will be well under way. None of them will be completed in less than three years, and work can be suspended any time an international agreement on naval reduction is reached.

50,000 Stomachs Aching From Mexican Malady

Mexico City, July 18 (A.P.).—Fifty thousand persons in the federal district of Mexico have stomach aches, according to an announcement by the health department tonight. The ache was a symptom of a strange malady of the digestive organs, believed to have been contracted by drinking water contaminated by the recent heavy rains.

The malady is not regarded as grave, for no deaths have been reported.

FOUR INDICTED AGAIN IN CLARKES' FAILURE

New York Jury Finds Eleven Counts Each Against Partners in Defunct Bank.

WOMAN WILL BE QUIZZED

New York, July 18 (A.P.).—James Rae Clarke, Hudson Clarke, jr., Philip Clarke and John F. Boukan, the partners in Clarke Bros., private bankers, were indicted today by the New York County grand jury on eleven counts each. They had previously been indicted by the Federal grand jury.

Today's indictments charge the partners with accepting deposits after they knew the bank was insolvent, a felony under the penal law. The Federal indictments charged them with using the mails to defraud and with concealing assets in bankruptcy.

At the Federal hearing being held into the failure, William Henry, who as "the owner of a $40,000,000 estate in Mexico" indorsed a $500,000 note to aid the Clarke Bros. in obtaining a loan the day before the bank failed, testified that he did not own the estate and had only a $45,000 claim against it.

The $500,000 note in question was signed by Milton C. Quimby, real estate operator, who testified before Commissioner Cotter yesterday that he never received any money on the note and signed it "as an accommodation to James Rae Clarke to help him to get a loan."

The day before the failure Clarke Bros. applied to J. P. Morgan & Co. and to the Irving Trust Co. for $500,000 loans, which was refused.

Assistant United States Attorney Mintzer, in charge of the investigation, announced today he had summoned for questioning a married woman to whom James Rae Clarke, elderly senior partner of the firm, had been sending flowers at a cost of between $25 and $30 a week for more than a year.

two years in jail and a $5,000 fine for hoarders, could not be invoked.

In an open letter printed today in the Christian Advocate, a Methodist publication, Dr. James H. Felts, an outstanding minister connected with the North Mississippi Methodist Conference and presiding elder of the Corinth district, takes Bishop Cannon to task.

Puts Question to Cleric.

Dr. Felts refers to Bishop Cannon's mention in the press recently about his "private affairs" and says:

"Now if as the 'servant of the church' it be your 'private affair' when you engage in business other than that to which you have committed yourself of your own free will and by the call of the church, even though that business appears to thousands of good men as one of the most dangerous and subtle species of gambling, may it not also be true that every preacher in the connection would be equally justified in resorting to such means to supplement his salary and build for himself and family at least a modest fortune?

"In your case men who are in the cotton business in my town do not hesitate to use the ugly word gambling when referring to such speculation, and some good men who did not vote for Smith do not hesitate to say 'if our pastor should do what this bishop has done he would be silenced.'"

Marine Corps Would Buy Design.

Marine Corps Headquarters yesterday wrote to Comptroller McCarl asking permission to purchase a design for commemorating the deeds of the Marine Corps expeditionary force. The Fine Arts Commission has withheld approval on two designs that have been submitted.

CAR MEN CONSIDER GENERAL WALKOUT

Sympathetic Labor Protest May Break Deadlock in New Orleans.

SERVICE IS BROADENED

New Orleans, July 18 (A.P.).—The New Orleans street car men's strike passed its seventeenth day in stalemate, with union leaders ready to make a major move at an open-air mass meeting tonight to consider a general labor sympathetic walkout.

At the close of the day the union and company were as far apart as they have ever been and the citizens' committee, appointed by the mayor as conciliators, threw up their hands in despair, declaring they saw no hope of an amicable settlement.

Alarmed by the broadening car service with nonunion labor, leaders of the carmen and other union heads prepared to present their case to the public from the platform in a park on Canal street. After this meeting union executives will meet in private session to consider the proposal for a general walkout in other industries in an effort to force the Public Service, Inc., to deal with the Carmen's Union.

Officials of the Public Service said in a statement that the local carmen's uuion was controlled by outsiders and ex-employes and by executives who disregarded contracts and agreements. The company denied being unfriendly toward organized labor, and added:

"We are no longer willing to enter into a contract with a union controlled by such influences. We have been patient as long as we could but every offer on our part has been rejected. With the officials of this union, it is a case of rule or ruin. We must now proceed with the operation of our property."

In a counterstatement union officials declared they would not enter a discussion over an open shop contract.

"Since the beginning of this trouble with the Public Service it has done nothing more than offer us an open shop contract that is marked a closed shop contract, thus endeavoring to deceive the public and injure us," the union statement said.

"Union officials demanded to know why the company officials would not accept Secretary of Labor James J. Davis as arbiter.

"We and the people of New Orleans are entitled to the reason," it added.

13 DIE WHEN TRAIN FALLS INTO CREEK

of the creek, was not entered until late tonight, the high water having made an earlier entrance impossible.

Of the bodies recovered, identification of only six of the victims had been made tonight. Those identified are:

Mrs. Mary McDonald, of West Palm Beach, Fla., en route to Colorado Springs.

Mrs. Ben Lewis, believed to be of Memphis, Tenn.

C. F. Carlic, 468 West 153d street, New York City.

Miss Julia Carlic, same address.

Mrs. Jennie Foltz, Memphis, Tenn.

Brooks Cline, Pullman porter, address unknown.

All bodies of the victims so far recovered have been removed from the scene of the wreck to Stratton and thence to Burlington by Coroner Orin P. Penny, of Kit Carson County.

The swirling torrent of water, carrying death and destruction in its wake, completely submerged car No. 200 of the train during most of the day, and it was nearly an hour after the wreck, survivors in the other coaches said, before it definitely was established that one car of the train actually was missing.

With the collapse of the bridge—less than 50 feet wide—over the Arroyo, eight cars, seven Pullmans and a chair car left the train and were strewn over the countryside. Two of the Pullmans—those at either end of the submerged death car—were left suspended from the track banks, partially submerged. Occupants of these two cars, as soon as they realized what had occurred, made their way to safety from the free ends of the cars.

Many of the passengers, survivors said, were awake at the time of the wreck. Many of them had been awakened but a few minutes before by the taking of a siding a few miles east of Stratton to permit the passing of the companion eastbound train. Railroad officials estimated tonight that the eastbound train had crossed the weakened structure over the arroyo less than 45 minutes prior to the collapse.

No Warning Received.

The train was traveling about 45 miles an hour at the time of the crash. No warning of impending danger had been received by anyone and railroad officials today announced that the crash was the first warning they had received of a wet roadbed. Residents here and at Goodland, Kans., all said today, however, that the region last night was visited by one of the heaviest rainstorms in recent years.

The wall of water forming on the watersheds on the eastern side of the continental divide, as a result of the heavy downpour, swept forward in every dry arroyo in the region.

Speeding across the plain oblivious of impending danger, Engineer M. V. Ryan, of Colorado Springs, rushed to his destination. The first faint rays of the dawn were just breaking in the Eastern sky. The train approached the bridge. The first engine crossed and immediately began running on the ties of the roadbed.

Train Is Broken Up.

"It skittched and bumped along the ties for a fraction of a second and then there was a crash," said Ryan. "The train apparently had parted and the two engines and a baggage car, a combination car and a day coach had cleared the bridge. Behind us the remainder of the thirteen coaches were strewn about the prairie."

Ryan, who has been a pilot on the run for a quarter of a century, immediately disconnected his engine from the train and rushed to Vonah, a siding 4 miles away. There he reported the accident to the dispatcher at Burlington, Colo., 18 miles east of here.

With assistance asked for, Engineer Ryan returned to the scene of the wreck, but was unable to reach the wrecked cars because of the high water which was rushing down the creek bed.

Residents of Stratton and the territory in the vicinity of the wreck today were emphatic in their declaration that the water in the arroyo last night and today was the first they had seen there in the last twelve years.

Hasty Rescue Parties Form.

Those in the cars which escaped wrecking hastily organized rescue parties and offered succor to the less fortunate ones. Among those for whom the survivors had the greatest praise was Morris Gest, New York theatrical producer, who, assisted by his secretaries, administered first aid to the injured.

E. J. Perry, of New Bedford, Mass., is the only known survivor of the car in the creek bed. He declared he had been awakened a few minutes before the wreck and with the first impact had been slightly stunned, but the inrushing of the cold waters into his berth had revived him, and he immediately punched out the window glass and left the car. He was attired only in his pajamas when other survivors rescued him from the water and removed him to one of the standing cars. His clothing and baggage were lost with the car.

An ironical turn of fate probably cost the life of Mrs. Mary McDonald, of West Palm Beach, Fla. who had traveled the entire way from St. Louis yesterday in the car immediately back of the ill-fated car.

Changes Compartments.

Because of her dislike to dress early in the morning to change cars for Colorado Springs, she changed compartments last night and rode to her death. One of her handbags was found in the rear car today.

As soon as rescue crews could be organized at Goodland, Kans., and Limon, Colo., the survivors were returned to Goodland, Kans., and thence to Oakley, Kans., where they resumed their journey to Denver, Colorado Springs and Coast points over the Union Pacific.

Late tonight wrecking cranes had been established at both ends of the creek and the waters had receded to such an extent that grappling hooks and chains were put in place in an attempt to raise the submerged car from the creek bed. The rushing waters had partly buried the car under silt and sand to such an extent that work of lifting the car was not expected to be completed until some time tomorrow.

Mussolini Praises Retiring U.S. Envoy

Fletcher His "Most Sincere Collaborator," Says Premier of Italy.

Rome, July 18 (A.P.).—Premier Mussolini in a letter of farewell to retiring American Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher, published tonight, says that he has had in him "the best and most sincere collaborator" in strengthening the ties between Italy and the United States.

The premier added that Fascist Italy "knows it had in you a most serene observer and a faithful interpreter to your Government and the friendly American people." The letter expressed deep regret that the ambassador was leaving his diplomatic career and concluded with "expression of my sincere friendship."

The ambassador replied with thanks not only for this sentiment, but for the courtesies he had received from Fascist officials during his five years in Rome.

NEWS OF THE LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

AREA OF NEW PARK FAMOUS IN HISTORY

Scenes of Civil War Battles Near Petersburg Are to Be Preserved.

BULLETS STILL FOUND

Petersburg, Va., July 18 (A.P.).—The National Military Park at Petersburg, already authorized by Congress, will preserve for all time the finest examples of Civil War engineering to be found. Improved roads winding between the Confederate and Federal entrenchments will make these interesting fortifications accessible to the public.

On other Civil War battlefields the fortifications were of a less permanent nature, built to withstand a few days' assault, while around Petersburg, where Grant wore Lee down with a ten-month siege unparalleled in American history, the entrenchments rival the trench fortifications of the World War. So perfect was the construction of the labyrinth of tunnels and trenches that today, 64 years later, they stand almost as Grant and Lee left them.

Here also may be seen the famous Crater Battlefield and the scene of the disastrous Federal attempt to mine the Confederate trenches. The visitor may pick bullets from the earthworks despite the fact that they were so productive of lead that they were once actually mined. The great tunnels may be entered and the engineering studied.

Grant's attack on Petersburg was in an effort to approach Richmond from the south and at the same time cut railroads that were supplying the Confederates. Failing to penetrate Lee's lines at Cold Harbor, the Federals crossed the James to find themselves opposing Lee again. A terrific battle was fought June 17, 1864, and Gen. Burnside lost faith in his ability to pierce the Confederate line.

Grant ordered his troops to "dig in" when he found Lee strongly entrenched and the two armies began the fight with spades.

Of the many battles fought in the ten-months siege, the crater remains the most spectacular. The Federals sank a shaft 35 feet deep and drove a tunnel 531 feet under the Confederate works, planting 8,000 pounds of gun powder in a well at the end. An attack was made ready when the mine was set to explode, but the detonation failed to take place. A Federal volunteer entered, found the fuse had gone out and relighted it. Two hours later the Confederate works rose high in the air, killing 278 officers and men.

Many other interesting scenes may be lived over by the student, including the defense of Fort Gregg by Duncan's Mississippians who died almost to a man in protecting Lee's withdrawal.

Fort Sedgwick and Fort Mahone are two of the most popular forts with the average visitor.

Provision for the park was made in the Army appropriations bill passed by Congress last year and signed by President Coolidge.

Farm Economics, Institute Theme

Virginia Classes to Stress Effect of Taxations and Tariff.

Special to The Washington Post.

Blacksburg, July 18. — Because the tariff and taxation have an important effect upon the farmers' prosperity, the economic aspect of agriculture will be stressed at the Institute of Rural Affairs, which is to be held at Virginia Polytechnic Institute on the mornings of July 31, August 1 and 2. Dr. Edwin Griswold Nourse, chief agricultural economist of the Institute of Economics at Washington, D. C., has been selected to lead the round-table conferences on such subjects as "Agriculture and the Tariff," "Control of Agricultural Surpluses" and "Taxation and the Farmer."

Dr. Nourse, a native of New York State, received his training in agricultural economics at Carroll University and the University of Chicago. He has been connected with the Wharton School of Commerce and Finance of the University of Pennsylvania. He has been a professor of economics and sociology at the University of South Dakota; has taught political economy at the University of Chicago; has served as professor of economics and sociology at the University of Arkansas and Iowa State College. He has served as president of the American Farm Economics Association and has written a widely used textbook on agricultural economics.

Confederate Hero May Be Honored

Legion, of Fredericksburg, Start a Movement to Erect Monument.

Richmond, Va., July 18 (A.P.).—A proposal to secure subscriptions from American Legion Posts throughout the world for a memorial near Fredericksburg, Va., commemorating the act of a Confederate soldier in giving at the risk of his life water to a wounded Federal soldier, is being actively supported by the Fredericksburg Post, it was announced at Sttae legion headquarters here.

If plans are carried through the monument would be erected within the next few years and, under tentative arrangements, dedicated during the national convention of the legion in Richmond, if that convention can be secured for this city. Leaders in the movement to obtain funds for the proposed monument are L. W. McWane, commander of the Fredericksburg Post, and Capt. G. M. Harrison, service officer.

Officials of the Virginia department of the American Legion are considering extending to the national organization an invitation to meet in Richmond in 1935. The invitation would be extended at the national convention in Louisville, Ky., in September, this year.

Upkeep of Madison Grave Is Proposed

Virginia History Director Suggests the Erection of Memorial Markers.

Richmond, Va., July 18 (A.P.).—A proposal that the Daughters of the American Revolution or some other patriotic organization take over the neglected Madison burial ground, where President James Madison and his wife, Dolly, are buried in Orange County, has been put forward by Dr. H. Headquarters of Civil War generals in their campaigns in Virginia will also be marked under the proposal.

FUND FOR FIRE HALL TO STAND AT $2,500

Clarendon Holding Company Rejects Proposal to Double Amount.

WORK WILL BEGIN SOON

BUREAU OF THE POST,
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

By a vote of 7 to 4, the Clarendon Citizens' Corporation, the holding company for the community hall, last night rejected the proposal that the corporation appropriate an additional $2,500, making a total of $5,000, to match a like sum from the board of supervisors for the erection of a firemen's hall in Clarendon.

Following much discussion, the corporation adopted a motion made by former Chief A. B. Eaton that the corporation give to the fire department $2,500 to proceed to purchase the site and start the erection of a suitable building to house the equipment. The motion also provided the appointment of a committee of three from the holding corporation to work with a like committee from the fire department to assist in the erection of a building.

The president appointed as the committee from the holding corporation Arthur J. Porter, chairman; L. C. McNemar and H. B. Mitchell.

Failure of the board of directors of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce to consider the program as prepared by the executive secretary, F. P. Woodbridge, providing for the holding of special group meetings to conisder projects for the five-year building program, the president announced that a special committee will be appointed to classify the program and consider carrying two or three of the major projects to a successful conclusion.

With construction work now going on along the Glebe road and bids to be opened for the widening of the Wilson boulevard from Military road to Clarendon avenue and prospects of the contract being awarded within the next ten days for the widening of the Lee highway, the question was referred to the roads committee to take up with the proper authorities to see that all three highways are not closed to traffic at the same time.

During three days that a special dental clinic was held, 60 children being treated, there was a total of 174 corrections made.

Those who have been placed on the five-point health list are: Iris June Miller, Walter G. Ruding, Dorothy V. Corcoran, Martha Diven, Norman Lamberson, Vernon L. Grimsley, Dewey H. Burleigh, jr., Linwood Andrews, Paul A. Foster, Edward Fones, Gladys Roy, James M. Norris, Marie Sue Palmer, Ruth C. Heaton, Eugene Spittle, Herbert Oppenhein, Chilton G. ORDER BARS CITIZENS WITH GUNS ON RAIDS

Prohibition Bureau from persons who, thinking to help it, would really hurt it. In some extremely dry communities, there are persons who are tempted to form a posse and go along with the prohibition agents every time a raid is to be made.

It is not so long ago that Renah Camaller, assistant district attorney in charge of liquor prosecutions here, loosed a bitter attack on ministers, or alleged ministers, who were serving as stool pigeons for the dry agents.

The Citizens Service Association, organized to help the authorities stamp out bootlegging in the National Capital, at one time employed Harry N. Douthitt as a "special investigator" to gather evidence and help the agents and the police in raiding speakeasies and the like.

Sperryville Pitcher's Arm Snaps During Game

Special to The Washington Post.

Warrenton, Va., July 18.—In the seventh inning of a ball game today between Warrenton and Sperryville, on the latter's grounds, B. Miller, pitching for Sperryville, broke his right arm. Miller had completed his wind-up and was in the act of delivering the ball when his arm snapped above the elbow with a report like a small pistol, and he fell to the ground in agony.

He was placed in an automobile and rushed to Culpeper for medical attendance. The game was called, the score reverting to the sixth inning and resulting in a tie of 4 to 4. Thirty years ago the late U. D. Benner, old University of Virginia star, suffered a similar injury while pitching for Warrenton.

ersham resign has no compelling senatorial force, as the commission is responsible solely to the President. Mr. Hoover saw to that contingency before he was inaugurated, getting Senators Jones (Republican), Washington, and Edge (Republican), New Jersey, dry and wet leaders, respectively, to withdraw their resolutions for a congressional prohibition inquiry to allow the President to have an investigation of his own outside the reach of Congress. The Senate has nothing to do with confirming the President's choices for the commission headed by Mr. Wickersham.

The inevitable political angles are growing rapidly. Senator Watson (Republican), Indiana, Senate Republican leader, in a statement today took Senator Caraway to task. He said in part:

"Chairman Wickersham's statement was an effort to enlist the support of the States in doing their full constitutional duty. The eighteenth amendment left the States concurrent power with the Federal Government to enforce its provision. Some of the States have not exercised that power."

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, who had heretofore withheld comment on the Wickersham letter, declared, "Mr. Wickersham has asucceeded in making it plain that he regards the law as unenforceable."

Although Senator Borah would not be quoted upon the question of whether or not the letter has impaired Mr. Wickersham's usefulness as chairman of the law enforcement committee, it is believed that the senator inclines to the view that the issuance of a public statement in advance of a thorough investigation by the commission may make it embarrassing for the chairman to continue in office. Also it was indicated that Senator Borah is inclined to believe that such an incident might have been avoided if the appointments of members of the Law Enforcement Commission had been submitted to the Senate for confirmation as is customary in naming important commissions.

Several Democratic senators were inclined to point out the resemblance between Mr. Wickersham's suggestion and the proposals made by Gov. Smith in his presidential campaign last year.

Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, a dry, said:

"If Gov. Smith had been elected and had appointed Wickersham chairman of the investigating committee which Smith promised to appoint, the letter of Gov. Smith's chairman would have been hailed as the first effort looking to the modification of the eighteenth amendment, revesting in the States much of the power granted to the Government by the eighteenth amendment."

Senator Caraway (Demcrat), Arkansas), another dry, remarked, "If Smith had been President and the chairman of his commission had made this statement, every one in the United States would say that Smith was plotting the destruction of prohibition, and there would not be any answer."

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, said that if Smith had been elected and a similar statement had been issued by the chairman of a commission appointed by Smith, "It would have caused a revolution.

"Smith could not have appointed any one starting out to destroy prohibition any more than the Hoover commission has done," Thomas said.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, would not comment beyond saying that Mr. Wickersham's suggestion is "along the line of Smith's proposal."

ANNAPOLIS' MAYOR WINS BY LONE VOTE

DECIDED IN FOURTH WARD

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., July 18.—Walter E. Quenstedt will retain his seat as mayor of Annapolis by the close margin of one vote. A special investigating committee of the new city council, which conducted a recount of the vote polled July 8, tonight declared his election over Charles E. Chance, Democrat.

The only other election in the history of Annapolis is which there was such a close fight was an aldermanic contest in the second ward nearly a score of years ago, when Frank A. Munroe, Republican, was defeated by Dr. Frank H. Thompson by one majority.

The original returns canvassed by the board of supervisors of elections gave Quenstedt's majority as 23. He was duly sworn into office. Chance declined to accept defeat on the grounds that a number of ballots that should have been declared defective and thrown out, were counted by the election officials, and the recheck showed his claim was pretty well founded. A total of 102 ballots was rejected because of improper markings. Of these Quenstedt lost 62 and Chance 40. The final count gives Quenstedt 967, Chance 966.

The original figures were, Quenstedt 1,029, Chance 1,006. Chance made a net gain of 4 in each of the first and second wards and 15 in the fourth ward. These figures wiped out Quenstedt's majority and the candidates were on even terms when the committee went into the third ward boxes. Excitement was intense at this stage of proceedings.

Quenstedt picked up a vote in one precinct there, while Chance evened the score in the other. There remained several ballots which the regular judges had rejected. One of these the committee held was legally marked for Quenstedt and decided the issue.

In the Fourth Ward, or "negro belt," the returns from which were made the chief issue by Chance and his friends, question was raised over 47 ballots, 17 of which were finally rejected because of improper marks. Sixteen of these were intended for Quenstedt and one for Chance, meaning a net loss to Quenstedt of fifteen votes.

City Councilor George B. Woelfel was in charge of the recount. The other members of the investigating committee were Aldermen Frank H. Thompson, jr., Charles W. Tucker, jr., and Thomas G. Basil, all Democrats, and Charles Spriggs, colored. Mayor Quenstedt was present at the recount, as also was Chance.

DOUBLY RECOMMENDED.

Perhaps the best recommendation for the Wickersham letter on prohibition enforcement lies in the fact that ardent wets and extreme drys are finding fault with it. To propose a rational remedy that extremists on both sides disapprove of and that provokes nationwide discussion is in itself no mean achievement on the part of the head of President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission.

It is probable that Mr. Wickersham anticipated a mixed reaction and that President Hoover believes it will be beneficial in more ways than one to encourage serious thought, praise or criticism, as the case may be, in order to give the people a chance to express themselves on this most controversial of national problems.

There may be much to gain in feeling the national pulse on any problem of government which intimately affects the people. Surely no one will seriously contend that prohibition constitutes an exception to this rule. A suggestion that the Government and the States may be able to improve prohibition enforcement by a new and practical allocation of police powers can hardly be described as constituting a question that the people must not be allowed to think about or discuss.

Similarly, nothing is gained by ignoring the fact that prohibition enforcement, under the present system, is not satisfactory. This is conceded by wets and drys and by the people generally. If it were not so there would be no reason for the President's commission to consider the subject at all and the commission has received countless appeals from sincere drys to remedy defects in enforcement of the prohibition law.

There can be no intelligent remedy without a study of the problem and there is no reason why the people should not participate in that study. Suggestions or recommendations that are mere sops to the extremists on one side or the other are worse than useless because they bury the problem deeper into the mire of conflicting emotions and doubts. Sincerity and fearlessness are above all necessary and Mr. Wickersham is now a target of criticism because he has shown both.

Senator Caraway, ardent dry, demands Mr. Wickersham's resignation on the ground that his statement has been a blow to the prohibition law. Gov. Ritchie of Maryland, who is perhaps the outstanding wet political figure in the Democratic ranks at the present time, sharply challenges Wickersham's statement that the States have an obligation to help enforce the Federal prohibition law.

The Maryland governor maintains a consistent attitude in declaring that the Volstead act has not imposed an obligation on the States to help enforce it. He has put his theory into practice in his own State and claims vindication in the results. The Law Enforcement Commission should devote its attention to crimes created by prohibition rather than to the suggestion advanced by Mr. Wickersham, according to Mr. Ritchie.

Of course no State can be compelled by legal process to enforce the Volstead act though each State has concurrent jurisdiction with the Government. The remedy which the drys might look forward to in case a State fails to enforce would be the establishment of a government by the people of the State which would enforce the law. Whether action would be necessary on the part of the Federal Government in case of a non-enforcing State is one of the subjects for consideration growing out of the Wickersham suggestion.

It will be noted that Gov. Ritchie joins issue with Mr. Wickersham and does not evade it. His criticism therefore promotes discussion instead of stifling it. Why not remove the artificial safety-valve and let in a maximum of constructive criticism of Mr. Wickersham's statement?

Why not open the floodgates and let the country hear from wets and drys, middle-of-the-road citizens as well as extremists? Commendation and blame, praise and censure, should be directed toward Mr. Wickersham and the Law Enforcement Commission. The more the better. Mr. Wickersham can stand it and so can President Hoover, who is undertaking the task of giving the people a voice in the attempt to settle one of their most perplexing problems.

CONFERENCE OF GOVERNORS.

For 21 years governors of the States have held annual conferences in which problems common to all have been considered. The present conference at New London, Conn., is attended by 26 governors and a few former State executives. Attention is being given to taxation, administration of law, aviation, prohibition and other subjects. Formal addresses are supplemented by round-table discussion and generous entertainment. In short, the governors are acquainting themselves with each other and taking a look at problems which extend beyond State lines.

Cooperation among the States seems to be the keynote of the conference. The need for concerted action is more pronounced as problems which are confined to a single State become fewer. The size of commercial concerns expands; better communication brings the State capitals closer together; the whole tendency of the age is to obscure State border lines. The result is increased demand for Federal supervision. The States have already lost exclusive rights to the police power. Their jurisdiction over education is threatened. Such encroachment upon State functions is largely due to the failure of the States to solve problems which are common to all.

The present conference has concerned itself with a number of proposed uniform laws, among them an extradition law to expedite the punishment of criminals. If a person convicted of a minor offense is wanted in another State for a felony, he often escapes punishment for one of the crimes. And if the jury fails to convict him after he has been extradited to the State where the more serious crime was committed, he is a free man. A proposed uniform law to correct this defect has been adopted in Idaho, Utah, New Mexico and Pennsylvania, but the efficacy of the law depends upon its general adoption. The need for cooperative action could not be more effectively illustrated.

Too much is often expected of the conference of governors. Only 26 of the 48 governors are attending the present sessions. When they return to their States they will have no opportunity of putting into effect the theories they have approved until legislative action is secured. Some of the States change governors every two years. A chief executive is hardly more than acquainted with the problems of his State in relation to other States before his term is up and the continuity of leadership is broken. Nevertheless, when governors from all parts of the country assemble to discuss problems common to them all the result is certain to be constructive. The fact that they recognize common interests and work toward unity of action, where practical, is encouraging. The lamentable thing is that the governors have no effective way of carrying out the policies agreed upon in conference.

CITIZEN TRAINING.

The season of the citizens' military training camps is under way. All over the country young men are in camp for a short period of training in the duties of the soldier and the citizen. Thousands of young men, from humble and wealthy homes, are meeting on the same plane, lodging and eating together, drilling side by side in the summer sun, boxing, wrestling and playing as intimate companions, and, in their spare moments, entertaining one another.

The recruits from the District, Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and New York are encamped at Fort Myer. The greeting they received from Col. Guy V. Henry was typical of greetings extended in many citizens' military training camps. He said: "You young men represent the best in America. Your coming indicates a willingness to work, and your acceptance by the authorities stamps you as physically fit, above average in general intelligence and of good moral character. The object of the camp is to develop these attributes in you; to produce a closer national and social unity; to teach you the privileges, duties and responsibilities of American citizenship; to give you elements of military training, and to demonstrate to the country that camp instruction of the kind contemplated will develop the youth of America and produce greater national strength, civil and military."

For most of the recruits, the training period is a delightful vacation. The instruction and discipline they receive is so generously supplemented by sports, invigorating exercise, and interesting outings that the C. M. T. C. becomes a pleasure as well as a source of development. It is a fine opportunity for the young men of America.

Much is being said about the irresponsibility and the criminal tendencies of modern youth, yet many improvements can be noted. The Department of Correction of New York has issued a statement showing that the percentage of prisoners between the ages of 16 and 21 has decreased from 25 per cent in 1916 to 18 per cent last year. If it were possible to trace the causes of this improvement, no doubt such movements as the C. M. T. C., the Boy Scouts of America, and others which seek to give young men good character foundations, would be found to have played a conspicuous part.

NEW SHIPS.

The need of a merchant marine and the folly and cost of unpreparedness are graphically demonstrated in the destruction of the war-time fleet of wooden vessels. When the United States entered the war, there were not enough boats for the transport of troops and materials. The country immediately entered upon an extensive ship-building program, but there was need for haste and no time to think of the future, and ships were slapped together without regard to the possibility of converting them to peace-time use. When the war was concluded, it was realized that the vessels could not take their place on the trade routes and the only step left was their destruction. The machinery and fixtures of value were removed, and one by one the vessels have been burned. To date about 115 have been destroyed and it is estimated that within a year the balance of the fleet will have gone up in smoke.

Millions of dollars were put into the vessels and the only peace-time result has been a series of spectacular bonfires. Had the Nation been prepared—had there been an extensive, efficient merchant marine, these millions could have been saved, or could have been expended for other war materials that might have been used to hasten the cessation of hostilities. This great waste, however, was used as an argument for the creation of a merchant marine, so it served a purpose. Perhaps a future emergency will not find the United States unprepared so far as ships are concerned.

Under the terms of the bill of sale by which the United States Lines were transferred to private operation, the owners agreed to construct ships designed to compete with any now in the transatlantic service. Recently the United States Lines announced that plans and models of two new vessels had been completed and on Wednesday, Joseph E. Sheedy, president of the operating corporation, announced that two vessels, superior in every respect to the Leviathan, would be laid down early in 1930. Within three years, these ships, each of which will cost in the neighborhood of $25,000,000, will be sailing in the North Atlantic trade. Under the terms of the Jones-White shipping bill, the ships will be looked upon as auxiliaries to the Navy and their design has been approved by Navy Department officials.

The new ships will play an important part toward reestablishing the United States as a maritime power. That alone is sufficient justification for looking upon their construction as of national importance. But they, and others that are to be built, will always stand as a second line of national defense. If the American merchant marine is reconstructed as it should be, and will be if interest does not lag, the Nation never again will be forced to witness the spectacle of millions of dollars worth of useless ships being consumed by flames.

Watchman of a Chicago school shoots an 11-year-old boy who refused to obey his command to leave the building. That's all right—there's no reason why prohibition agents should have all the fun.

Two hundred United States motorists were stranded overnight in Canada when a ferry broke down, but where could one be more happily stranded?

What has come over Premier Mussolini? He waited two hours for the American fliers to land, without once ordering their immediate arrival.

GOVERNMENT SALARIES

From the New York Times.

How do Government salaries compare with those paid by private enterprise? The Federal Personnel Classification Board has been at work for some time on an exhaustive investigation of the field services which throws a good deal of light on this question. The survey, not yet completed, covers widely 105,000 employes of the United States Government. For comparison, the board was able to obtain the salary scales of no less than 500,000 men and women in private employ. The charts show the "scissors" curve that those familiar with conditions in the service would expect. With only a few exceptions, the Government pay scale below the $2,000 level is more liberal than the average pay scale for similar non-Government positions. For those above the $2,000 level it is less liberal. In the higher ranges, including the more important executive officials, the disparity is marked.

The "white collar" workers are mostly in what is known as the "clerical, administrative and fiscal" service. It is composed of sixteen grades, with salaries ranging from $1,260 to $9,000 or more. Adding machine operators, file clerks, telephone operators and routine typists comprise the lowest grade. They are paid on an average $1,374 a year. One of the things brought out by the survey is the extraordinary extent to which the pay of this particular group of workers has been standardized in general industry. It varies only a few dollars either way from an average (for 81,000 employes) of $1,047. For these men and women Government pay is 30 per cent better. As the elements of judgment, discretion and executive ability are introduced into the higher classes of employment, the established commercial rate advances more rapidly than the Government scale. In the higher brackets privately paid salaries are so much higher than those paid by the Government that "one might infer that in general industry greater recognition is given to administrative ability."

The board is inclined to attribute this disparity to the fact that the Government pay scale is fixed in advance, whereas in the commercial world the duties and responsibilities of the job are to a great extent created by the incumbent. In the lower grade employments the private employer takes advantage of circumstances that permit him to dictate the wage; in the higher grade the position is reversed. But in the higher reaches of Government employment it is not the employe who is in the commanding position, but the Government, due to the fact that his job has no counterpart outside. The board might have added that in many routine executive positions the Government is too often content with mediocrity, and pays accordingly. But such considerations plainly do not apply either to the experts in Government bureaus like the income tax unit or the Bureau of Standards, where private industry exerts a steady pull resulting in a heavy turnover, or to the posts of large and important executive responsibility.

Many industrial leaders consulted by the Classification Board thought that the salaries of Government executives should be equalized with those outside. That is perhaps a counsel of perfection. Under present conditions many who accept high public responsibilities are called upon to make an unreasonable financial sacrifice, but even when the most flagrant injustices are corrected they must be ready to find their reward elsewhere than in financial return.

The committee estimates that 400,000 frame houses could be built with the lumber used in making boxes, generally discarded after their first use. THE GRADUATION.

The college president called his name,
And when the boy appeared
No doubt he thought it was for him the throng of people cheered.
No doubt they thought it was for him
they loudly clapped their hands,
But they were paying tribute to a mother in the stands.

"Well done, my boy," the president remarked as he stood there,
"I am very proud this morning your achievements to declare."
But that glorious diploma marked a mother's triumph, too,
For that day of graduation saw her fondest dream come true.

Oh, the days of tedious stitching! Oh, the miles of hem and seam
She had braved with aching fingers to achieve that single dream.
And I wondered if he knew it, as he proudly walked away,
How she'd worked for that diploma and that graduation day.

If a Hypnotized Man Does a Murder the Hypnotist Is Responsible.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

WHAT, in law and common sense, is an "accessory before the fact?"

One who knowingly contributes to the perpetration of a crime.

One who provides bribe money or poison or explosives or burglar tools, knowing their use will be criminal, must share in the criminal's guilt.

There may be guilt, however, without criminal intent. When negligence or carelessness become as harmful as evil intention could be both law and common sense regard them as criminal.

One who sells a supply of poison to a homicidal maniac may have no evil purpose, but he knows that he may be contributing to tragedy and that knowledge fixes his responsibility and his guilt.

Consider, now, the sale of bootleg whisky.

Long before prohibition the moral sense of the Nation had condemned intoxicants. The railroads and other industries had refused to employ drinking men. The saloon was hated because it contributed to poverty and crime.

With prohibition came controversy and unreasoning partisanship and the fundamentals of morality and justice were sacrificed, but men still realize that whisky causes crime and public opinion regards the seller of bootleg whisky as an accessory before the fact of crime.

The seller may have no other purpose than the making of an easy profit, but he knows that the stuff he sells may be the cause of innumerable tragedies—that victims crazed by it are potential criminals—and that knowledge makes him morally responsible for any evil that may result.

We have too many laws now—many of them foolish, many of them unjust—but neither their number nor their absurdity should prevent the passing of another law when circumstances and justice demand it.

We need a law that will hold the bootlegger guilty as an accessory before the fact when the stuff he sells causes crime.

If he sells poisoned whisky that kills the buyer his guilt is so deserving that no man defends him.

Why, then, should there be doubt of his guilt when the stuff he sells transforms the buyer into a maniac and results in the death of a third person wholly innocent?

The merits or demerits of prohibition have nothing to do with the matter. The question is whether the seller of a drug that inspires crime shall share the guilt of the criminal.

Common sense and common justice hold him responsible.

If he is not responsible, then one who "incites to riot" is not responsible for the evil done by the rioters.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE HOURS-IN-THE-AIR FLIERS.

(The scene is a municipal center where two birdmen, Blooks and Schnozzel, are being honored after just having established a world's record for endurance. They have been up ten days.)

Mayor (addressing the fliers)—Gentlemen, we are here today to celebrate an epochal event. You two daring heroes of the blue, by remaining ten days in the air, have accomplished something no other airmen have been able to achieve. You have set a world's record that will endure for all time, and I am indeed happy to present you this medal, which * * *

Mayor's Secretary (interrupting him and whispering)—Just a moment, your honor. This, er, is a telegram which has just come in and it, er, somewhat alters matters.

Mayor—What is it?

Secretary—It seems that two other airmen, Schmaltz and Rosenwaller, have just come down in California after being in the air fifteen days and seventeen hours.

Mayor (resuming)—Gentlemen, tidings have just been received which somewhat change the complexion of this ceremony. Two birdmen have alighted in California after setting a new record of more than fifteen days in the air. We hail this achievement, but, nevertheless we may justly proceed with this ceremony and honor you two boys as pioneers who were the first to remain ten days in the air. Ten full days in the air continue a truly remarkable and noteworthy performance and I am glad to present this medal to you as two of the world's most * * *

Mayor—What now?

Committee Member—We've just heard over the radio that Mooney and Puddicombe, a pair of Detroit airmen, have come down in Ohio after remaining in the air two full weeks and three days.

Mayor—Gentlemen, I am informed that Mooney and Puddicombe have come down in Ohio after remaining aloft nearly two and a half weeks. Such a feat is deserving of the greatest praise. Nevertheless the record set by you two boys was a noteworthy one at the time and I take great pleasure in presenting this medal to you for having been among the earliest fliers to attempt * * * Policeman (nudging the mayor)—Just a second, boss.

Mayor—Now what's happened?

Policeman—The newspaper boys have just sent word that Broaches and Czologowski have come down in Missouri after having remained in the air three weeks, two days and seventeen hours.

Mayor (wearily)—Gentlemen, two more fliers have alighted and set a new world's record for hour-in-the-air flights. Accept this medal with my best wishes.

The Two Fliers (now quite disgusted)—Why?

Mayor—As a couple of old-time airmen who in the early days of American aviation did their best.

True Agony.

Philadelphia Inquirer: What makes a hop-skip-and-jump tourist, who has just done Europe in four weeks, groan in anguished disappointment is to have some one invite him to "tell all about" his trip and then, just as he is about to swing into action, be drawn into the back eddies and compelled to listen to the other fellow's technical description of the method he used in improving his golf. There, dearly beloved, is agony of the soul seven times compounded.

LETTERS TO THE EDITORS.

As the Boy Scouts Sail for England, Young Communists Prepare to Sail for Russia to Combat an "Insidous Influence."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On Wednesday 102 Boy Scouts, representing part of the contingent already gone a yet to go, to represent the United States at the Birkenhead, England, International Boy Scout Jamboree, sailed from New York. On the same day the Young Pioneers of America, an associate group of the Communist party, announced that on July 24, 2 young Communists would sail for Russia to study conditions in the Soviet. The trip, it was announced, is to combat the "insidious influence" of the International Scout Jamboree, the purpose of which is to "make a great step toward the mobilization of youth in general preparation for an attack on the U. S. S. R."

Contrast these two groups. On one hand, are the Boy Scouts, being trained in the principles of humanitarianism, better citizenship and unselfish service. On the other, are the Young Pioneers, being counseled by their elders to work for the "international revolution," and being brought up to believe that the spilling of blood for the advancement of Socialism is a noble thing. On the one hand, are happy boys, developing as boys should develop, and, on the other, are gloomy children whose minds have been filled with dark thought and who have been taught that it is their duty to kill and destroy.

Which is the "insidious influence?" Quite apart from the social side of the picture, I pity those children who have been enrolled by their parents in the Young Pioneers and who have had no choice but to become antisocial.

Exporting Nations Can Not Afford Tariff Reprisals—The Tariff Affects Only a Percentage of Imported Articles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all this talk about shutting out foreign products from the United States by means of a new tariff law? From the general discussion on the subject it appears that practically everything sent into the United States is taxed at the expense of the American consumer. I was surprised to learn this week when the Senate finance committee considered the free list that 60 per cent of all imports enter this country without duty. I have no doubt that many of your readers will be surprised that the percentage of free imports is so large.

It should be noted, too, that nearly 7 per cent of the dutiable imports are luxuries which are shipped here regardless of the tariff. The Government is entitled to levy a revenue-producing tariff on such articles. It brings cash into the Treasury without interfering with foreign trade.

As to the tariff cutting off commerce in articles that are dutiable, it is merely theory. International trade may be expected to steadily increase if Congress enacts higher duties for those industries and those branches of agriculture in need of relief. Talk of other countries shutting out American goods is ridiculous. It should be remembered that France exports 38 per cent of her products, Germany 54 per cent and the United Kingdom 62 per cent. Nations which are so dependent upon their exports can not well afford to indulge in tariff reprisals.

HENRY WOODLANDER.

If the Wickersham Plan Is Adopted the Backbone of Prohibition Will Be Broken.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the Government adopts the plan suggested by Chairman George W. Wickersham, of the Law Enforcement Commission, for the correction of evils growing out of the liquor traffic, the backbone of Federal prohibition will be broken. The principle that the States should have exclusive control of the policing power is fundamentally sound, but if the Government intends to withdraw its agents now in charge of prohibition in the States, it never will be enforced.

Most of the actual enforcement that is now being done comes from the Federal Government. A few of the States still attempt to carry it out, but the majority are indifferent. Practically every liquor violation case of importance is taken into the Federal courts. Nearly every time that a liquor ring is broken up, it is the Federal agents who do it. Let them cease their activity and the country will again be wet, much wetter than it is at present.

Can it be that the Federal Government is convinced that the whole attempt to curb the people's thirst is a hopeless mess, and is trying to shift the responsibility to the States? If so, the plan ought to be recognized as such, and should not be put before the people as a means of securing better enforcement.

Filipinos Can Not Eat Their Cake and Have It Too.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations on your editorial on "Philippine Inconsistency." It is to the point and should result in illuminating some of those people who are misled by the Filipinos who ask for political independence and economic dependence at the same time. These two ideas contradict each other in the present stage of Philippine development. What do the Filipinos want, anyhow—independence or free trade? They can't have both. Since Senor Roxas asked for free trade his protestation of wanting independence is all bosh.

BEES AND CHERRIES.

Abundance and excellence of his cherry crop is attributed by Senator W. W. Farnsworth, of Waterville, largely to the activities of honey bees, says the Toledo Blade. The senator says he "hired" 104 swarms to fly among his trees. As they gathered honey in blossom time the bees distributed pollen, so that the blooms were fertilized and luscious fruit developed upon twig and branch which otherwise might have been only ornamental.

Students of agriculture and entomology sound warning so often that man must battle for very existence against insect pests which menace food supplies that we forget that some insects are man's very useful and willing servants.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Air Sponsors' Organization Seen as Need

Mrs. Hoover, Mrs. Coolidge Both Would Prove Eligible.

By JEAN ELIOT.

WHY doesn't somebody start a Society of Sponsors of Airplanes? It will be remembered that there is a flourishing Society of Sponsors of the U. S. Navy, composed of women who have christened ships of war for Uncle Sam, which meets annually in Washington and brings many distinguished visitors to town. And by this time there must be scores of prominent women who have been "sponsors in baptism," as it were, for giant airplanes.

Mrs. Hoover would be eligible for membership in such an organization and so would Mrs. Coolidge, both having christened planes designed for use in Pan American aviation projects. And just yesterday Mrs. F. Trubee Davison, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War for Aviation, broke a bottle—what it contained was not mentioned—over the prow of the great Curtiss Hawk, in which an Army pilot, Capt. Ross G. Hoyt, is about to attempt a "week-end trip" from Mitchel Field, Long Island, to Nome, Alaska, and return. The plane was named the Newalaska and the christening ceremony took place at Mitchel Field.

Moreover, Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, jr., wife of former Senator Wadsworth, was pressed into service to christen the Nonkah, which inaugurated air mail service between Buffalo and Toronto. This ceremony was held on Monday at Buffalo, and it is of record that honest-to-goodness champagne was used for the christening.

Where it came from, deponent sayeth not. But in this connection it is interesting to remember in this day when prohibition looms so large in the news, that former Senator Wadsworth was—and presumably still is—a crusader for modification. It is said that his wet sympathies helped defeat him when he ran a good second to Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, in his last campaign.

Although Senator and Mrs. Wadsworth made their exit from the official stage with his defeat, they are still "of Washington," happily, for they retain their pleasant home in Woodland drive and spend part of each year there. Last winter, however, they were in Hawaii, and they have been at Hampton, their farm in the Genesee Valley of New York, since early summer. So we had only brief visits from them in the autumn and the spring. Mrs. Wadsworth, who was Miss Alice Hay, is the daughter of the late John Hay, Lincoln's secretary and Roosevelt's Secretary of State.

The youngest candidate for membership in the Society of Airplane Sponsors—to go back a bit—would probably be the little daughter of the Minister of Colombia and Senora de Olaya. Early last spring she christened a plane to be used in service between Colombia and the United States, the ceremony being held at Bolling Field.

Senora de Padilla to Sail for Europe Today.

Ambassador Is Featured In Fiction

Former Envoy to Spain Appears As Character in Novel.

Mr. Alexander P. Moore, U. S. Ambassador to Peru, will arrive in New York on Monday on the Santa Maria from Peru and will be at the Ambassador Hotel for a few days. Presumably he will then come to Washington, for most of our envoys do when they return from foreign service.

While the current magazines are filled with articles by—or about—men and women prominent in public life, it has remained for Ambassador Moore to be featured recognizably in fiction. He is not mentioned by name, but the "American Ambassador to Spain," who is an important character in Gouverneur Morris' beguiling serial, "Driftwood," now running in the "Cosmopolitan," is obviously Mr. Moore. His popularity was extraordinary when he represented the United States at the court of Madrid and the "American Ambassador" in Mr. Morris' story has the same qualities of enthusiasm, naturalness, kindness and dependability which won friends for Ambassador Moore all over Spain, not only among princes and potentates but among bull fighters, gypsies and such colorful characters in which Spain abound and which make up the dramatics personae of "Driftwood."

Some of the minor scenes of the story are lain in the American summer embassy at San Sebastien.

Mrs. Philander C. Knox is spending a few days in Washington and is staying at the Mayflower.

It is an annual event, arranged by the guild as a part of their contribution to the welfare and happiness of the ladies at the home. Cedarstone, situated on Brookville road, is one of the loveliest of Maryland estates and is surrounded by spacious grounds planted with old-fashion flowers, shrubs and cedar trees. The residence contains many pieces of colonial period furniture.

The transportation in buses to and from Cedarstone is arranged by the rector of St. John's Church, the Rev. Phillips Dales.

The marriage of Miss Myrl Agnes Hazel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hazel, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., to Mr. Joseph J. J., president of Gonzaga College, who also was celebrant of the nuptial mass. The bride was gowned in white satin, with sleeves and trimming of chantilly lace. Her veil was of tulle, with seed pearl ornaments and she carried white roses and lillies of the valley.

Miss Agnes Readon, who was the only attendant, wore shell pink chiffon, made on similar lines to the bride's gown with a large picture hat of the same shade, and she carried pink roses. Mr. Ferdinand Frazier, of Montreal, Canada, was best man. A reception followed the ceremony.

Here's That New Hygiene

That Lasts 3 to 5 Times Longer

95% Softer—10 Times More Absorbent

ISABELL OSTRANDER, R. N. Noted Student of Women's Hygiene

A Discovery That Experts Say Will Virtually Revolutionize the Hygiene Habits of Women. Employs the Superlative Softness of Rayon Cellulose in Banishing All Possibility of Irritation. Multiplies Absorbency Over Present Ways 10 Times—Thus Remains Effective Hours Longer.

THERE is now an utterly new, vastly more gentle and longer lasting hygienic pad, the laboratory creation of one of the outstanding industries of the world.

Its filler is the world's most exquisitely soft product, pure Rayon Cellulose. And thus it banishes all chafing, all irritation from the wearing of a sanitary pad. It cannot irritate.

Its absorbency is 10 times greater than any other pad yet discovered. And that means it can be worn hours longer, in safety and peace-of-mind, than any other pad. Consider what this means.

It is, of course, as easily disposable as tissue. It has 76% greater power of deodorization than any other pad.

It is called VELDOWN and in the first city where it was introduced, over 10,000 women a day discarded harsher, less efficient ways and adopted it.

Protected by world wide patents it is utterly different from any other pad now known or ever known to women. New design, new material—a wholly new creation in whose laboratories the rayon industry was cradled. Experts say it will virtually revolutionize the hygienic habits of women the world over.

Due to manufacturing economies, it sells for never more than the commonsense price of 40c. And thus makes continuing with old ways a folly. Get it at any store in ready wrapped package.

"The skin on my face became very rough and itchy. Later pimples broke out almost all over my face and burned and itched, causing me to scratch. They were hard, large and red and festered, and when I scratched them it made them very sore. I suffered with them for about five years, losing some sleep at night.

"A friend advised Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I purchased some, and after using three cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Irene Shuman, R 1, Box 73, Hoboken, Ga.

LEADERS OF ROTARY ADJOURN ASSEMBLY

Presidents and Secretaries End Two-Day Session in Braddock Heights.

HISTORIC POINTS VISITED

Special to The Washington Post.

Frederick, Md., July 18.—Following sessions lasting two days the annual assembly of presidents and secretaries of Rotary International adjourned this afternoon. A large number of delegates visited the grave of Francis Scott Key, author of the "Star-Spangled Banner," in Mount Olive Cemetery; the home of Barbara Fritchie, Civil War heroine, and other points of interest. Others motored to Washington.

The principal social event was a dinner at the Hotel Braddock in Braddock Heights, attended by 160 members, including about 50 from the Frederick club. The event was in honor of the visiting members and was in charge of Prof. Ignatius Bjorlee, principal of the Maryland State School for the Deaf and governor of the Thirty-fourth district, comprising Maryland, the District of Columbia and parts of Pennsylvania and West Virginia. At the opening session at the Maryland school welcomes were extended by Glenn O. Garber, president of the local club, and Prof. Bjorlee. George Bahlke of Baltimore, past district governor, spoke on opportunities and responsibilities of club presidents, and Roy Danzer, of Hagerstown, spoke on the relation of the president and secretary of the board of directors and its aims and objects.

Ridgely P. Melvin, of Annapolis, spoke on the district conference and subjects incident to district administration. He emphasized the importance of holding district conferences as the culmination of the year's work. Oliver C. Short, of Baltimore, vice president of the Baltimore club, delivered an address on organizing new clubs. George Harris, Washington, sergeant-at-arms of Rotary International for twelve years, who was scheduled for an address on the duties and responsibilities of that position, was unable to attend on account of having sailed for Europe. Joseph W. Stayman, past district governor, spoke on the aims and objects of service clubs. Guy N. Gundaker, of Philadelphia, president of Rotary International, stressed importance of properly presenting Rotary to the communities where clubs exist.

A demonstration was given by the pupils of the Maryland school. The pupils placed their hands on a piano and interpreted the sound of the music from vibrations. A drill and dance also were given.

Special breakfast sessions were held this morning presided over by Ralph Cummings, vice president of Rotary International, and Howard Witmer, of Lancaster, Pa. Mr. Gundaker delivered an address at the session at the Maryland school. Among the concluding speakers were Charles E. Wood, of Washington, special deputy of the Boy Scouts of America, and William U. Madden, secretary of the Baltimore club.

WOMAN WHO WINKED NOW SEEKS DIVORCE

Mrs. Myrtle Owen Herbert Asks Custody of Child and Alimony.

SHE CHARGES DESERTION

Alleging that her husband, Joseph G. Herbert, of 1319 F street northwest, has not lived with her since August, 1928, when she obtained his release from Occoquan where he was serving a sentence for violating the prohibition act, Mrs. Myrtle Owen Herbert, of 1000 Twenty-second street northwest, yesterday filed suit for limited divorce in District supreme court.

Mrs. Herbert was a codefendant with her husband on the liquor charge and at the time of her trial was alleged to have winked at one of the jurors. Sergt. George M. Little, of the police liquor squad, called the attention of the court to the alleged wink and as a result a mistrial was declared. Later, at a rehearing, Mrs. Herbert was acquitted and Herbert was found guilty, and sentenced.

Mrs. Herbert alleges that she borrowed $300 on her property, and secured Herbert's release from the District workhouse, but that instead of returning to her he left town with another woman whom she identifies as a "Mrs. Preston." She alleges that Herbert and "Mrs. Preston" took her child, Myrtle Justina Herbert, now six and one half years old, with them, but that later she found the child at 820 Sommerset place northwest, "Mrs. Preston's home." She now has custody of the child, she sets out, and asks that she be appointed permanent custodian. She also asks for temporary and permanent alimony for necessities arising out of custody of the child. Although her husband makes $100 a week he has not contributed but $5 a week to the support of the child since he left her, she declares.

The couple were married July 26, 1921, according to the declaration. Attorney John P. Mullen represents the plaintiff.

Slain Gambler's Widow Wed to British Banker

New York, July 17 (A.P.).—The recent marriage in London of Mrs. Carolyn Rothstein, widow of the slain Broadway gambler, to Robert Beha, British banker and antique rug expert, became known here today.

Abraham Smolens, counsel for Mrs. Rothstein, in a contest over Rothstein's will, said she met Beha three years ago. Mrs. Rothstein had been living apart from her husband at the time he was shot on the night of November 4 in the Park Central Hotel.

Big Plane Crashes in Fog; Five British Airmen Hurt

Aldershot, England, July 18 (A.P.).—Five British army airmen were seriously injured today in the wreck of a giant royal air force Virginia bomber between Altom and Basingstroke.

The plane had flown from an airdrome near Winchester after night operation, and the pilot was making a forced landing in a thick fog. The plane struck a bank and somersaulted into a field.

King George Countinues Gains After Operation

London, July 18 (A.P.).—Announcement that King George had maintained his progress from the effects of the operation of Monday morning was made tonight after the usual visit to Buckingham Palace of his physicians. His majesty was visited today by his sons, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York.

Annulment Petition Alleges Bigamy.

Joseph Skinner, of 126 Sixteenth street northeast, asked the District Supreme Court yesterday to annul his marriage to Lillie M. Skinner, of 8-A N street northwest, in his petition filed through Attorneys Howard, Hays and Davis, alleges that at the time of the marriage his wife had a living husband from whom she had not been divorced.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS.

GOLF AND LAME BACKS.

IT may be advisable to have an X-ray examination made of the backbone as a preliminary to golf. Golf clubs may require applicants for membership to submit an X-ray picture of their backbones. Polo clubs may adopt the same policy.

Large industrial concerns find their heaviest losses are due to claims for lame backs. Some of them are protecting themselves by requiring an X-ray picture of the backbone as a part of the entrance examination. This picture is filed with the candidate's other papers and is available for study if any claim for lame back arises. It has been found that this procedure reduces the claims for compensation for lame back by much more than one-half. Either the company rejects the application for a job because of the conditions shown by the X-ray or else they accept him but put him on a job where there is no special strain on the back; or else the employe, knowing what his X-ray shows, avoids those strains which cause back symptoms or refrains from asking for compensation for troubles which he knows were not the result of his employment. And now may come the turn of the employer class through backaches developed by golf and polo players. Dr. Horace finds backache somewhat prevalent in these two groups of players. Running the trouble down he finds that it does not follow the distance shots. It is not caused by drives with drivers, brassies or even with midirons. It follows brisk, snappy twists of the body such as are developed in the use of mashies and niblicks. The single strokes made during play are not responsible for trouble, though presumably a player trying to play out of trap or getting out of some other rough might find himself with a backache. The principal danger, according to Dr Gray, is to men who go on the practice greens and there try out some shot repeatedly until they feel they have mastered it.

The first feeling is a sensation of strain in the back muscles. One or two repetitions of the stroke after the onset of this sensation and the man flobbles into the clubhouse with a Charleyhorse of the back, if that is a proper name for it. He probably takes a hot bath and a massage. Polo players have been known to have similar experiences.

NEW IN SOME ANGLES.

F. A. B. writes: I have been suffering from constipation for years. As the result of some study of glycogen and the liver function, I decided to give sugar a trial. I did so and it has worked perfectly for over a year and is still giving entirely satisfactory results.

I eat two or three pieces of hard candy following my meals, or else I eat two cubes of loaf sugar or a teaspoonful of granulated sugar. I do not use soft or compound candies. I drink an abundance of water. The remedy is cheap, it is harmless and it does away with pills and purgatives and it has worked—with me at least.

REPLY.

The method is not new in some of its angles.

A very efficient remedy for constipation is lactose or milk sugar. Babies are given various sugars partly for their laxative effect. Malt sugar is supposed to be the best of these. A sugar from wheat germ and bran is recommended for this purpose.

Laborite Heads British In International Group

London, July 18 (A.P.).—Commander Joseph M. Kenworthy, Labor M. P. for Hull, has just been elected chairman of the British section of the Interparliamentary Union.

It was with him that Representative Fred A. Britten (Republican), of Illinois, had correspondence regarding a plan for an unofficial naval conference between parliamentarians of Great Britain and the United States.

The Interparliamentary Union meets in Geneva at the end of August. Representative Britten is to be one of the American delegates.

Though no arrangements have been made yet for a formal conference between the American and British delegations there, the two delegations will discuss Anglo-American affairs informally. It is also of significance that the present British section of the union has a Labor majority, with both a Labor secretary and a Labor chairman.

MRS. D.T. WRIGHT, 61, DIES AT HOME HERE

Wife of Former Judge Was a Descendant of Distinguished Pioneer Family.

LEAVES FOUR CHILDREN

Mrs. Alice Williams Wright, wife of former Judge Daniel Thew Wright, died at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon at her home at the Wardman Park Hotel after five weeks' illness.

Mrs. Wright was a descendant of a distinguished American family, being a daughter of William H. Williams and Laura Peter Williams, and a granddaughter of George Armistead Peter. Her ancestors settled in this country on the Eastern Shore of Maryland and played a conspicuous part in early American history. Subsequently they moved to Riverside, near Cincinnati, Ohio, where Mrs. Wright was born 61 years ago on October 29, 1867.

Her family, like that of her husband, former Judge Wright, was prominent in the life of Cincinnati during and for many years after the Civil War period.

In December, 1904, Mr. and Mrs. Wright moved to Washington and, with their children, have been socially prominent here in the last quarter of a century. Mr. Wright, formerly a Justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, is now one of the leading members of the Washington bar.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Wright is survived by a son, Daniel Thew Wright 3d, and three daughters, Mrs. Gladys Wright Church, Mrs. Harry A. Kite and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming.

Funeral services will be held at the Wardman Park Hotel at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

District Firm Sues Radio Company for $102,987

The Carroll Electric Co., of 714 Twelfth street northwest, filed suit in District Supreme Court yesterday against the Freed-Eisemann Radio Corporation, a New York concern, seeking to recover damages of $102,987.42 for alleged breach of contract.

In its declaration, the Washington company claims that it had a contract to distribute radios for the Freed-Eisemann corporation in the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and parts of West Virginia, and Delaware. The contract was to run until March 31, 1930, but was cancelled June 19, last, the plaintiff alleges. The sum which the Carroll company seeks to recover represents alleged loss in prospective profits. Douglas, Obear & Douglas represent the plaintiff.

Sentence Is Deferred In Liquor Case Plea

Joseph John Marshall, 30 years old, of 1402 New Hampshire avenue northwest, pleaded guilty in Police Court yesterday to a charge of possessing liquor. Sentence will be imposed next week.

Marshall was arrested several days ago by Policemen G. C. McCarron and J. A. Mostyn on a warrant sworn to by Prohibition Agent John Lund. The police reported to the district attorney's office that when they entered the New Hampshire avenue establishment they found several persons sitting around tables in the front, and Marshall in the rear cutting lemons. They also reported they found twelve pints of whisky on the premises.

Utilities Board Silent on Trip

District Commission Reports Baltimore Conference as Satisfactory.

Members of the District Public Utilities Commission yesterday expressed themselves as fully satisfied with the results of their official visit to the Maryland Utilities Commission in Baltimore.

The three commissioners, Maj Gen. Mason M. Patrick, retired, chairman; Harleigh H. Hartman, vice chairman, and Col. William B. Ladue, engineer commissioner, hero of battles with the former Childress commission, were accompanied by Earl V. Fisher, executive secretary of the commission.

Members of the commission were reticent regarding the details of their conversations with the Maryland commission, shunting questions aside with the declaration that the visit was satisfactory to the District and apparently equally satisfactory to the Maryland commission officials, but that there had been nothing discussed which might be said to mark a new era in the functioning of the two commissions.

Walther League Ends Convention

Stabilization of Industry Is Due to Church, Speaker Asserts.

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 18 (A.P.).—The thirty-seventh International Walther League Convention, which has been in session here since last Sunday, was brought to a close today with an address by Henry Dahlon, New York business man, in which he declared that the stabilization of modern industry had been made possible through the civilizing influence of the church.

The convention completed its routine work with the adoption of a number of resolutions pertaining to its program of activities among the young people of the Lutheran Church. A resolution urged that league members who contemplate a course in higher education give consideration to entering Valparaiso University (Valparaiso, Ind.), which now is operated as a Lutheran institution.

The league will sponsor a short-story contest to be conducted by its publication, the Walther League Messenger. Continuation of the oratorical contest held in connection with each annual convention was voted. The contest this year was won by Miss Edna Eberlein, of Shawona, Wis.

Austrian Admits Intent To Kill President Miklas

Vienna, July 18 (A.P.).—A man, apparently demented, was taken by the police today after he had loitered near the gates of the foreign office for some time with a loaded revolver in his pocket. Police said that he confessed to intending to ambush President Miklas.

He is Anton Leitner, a penniless tailor's assistant, who was confined in an asylum for two months.

This last spring, while suffering from a persecution mania, one of his sisters died in an asylum and another is still under restraint.

Charles J. Rittenhouse, trading as the Home Peanut Co., filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy yesterday in District Supreme Court. He listed liabilities of $4,906.37 and assets of $486.93. Attorney James M. Smith represents Rittenhouse.

New Acacia Policy Contract.

Acacia Mutual Life Association of this city announced a new policy contract which has just been added to the large list of those already available to persons eligible for membership in the association.

This new policy, known as the Acacia Special Protection Policy, affords, as its name implies, special protection which is low in cost and which is designed to meet special needs.

In addition to providing maximum protection at minimum cost, Acacia's special protection policy includes also the following features: Cash surrender value, paid-up and extended insurance, disability waiver of premium and monthly annuity (if applied for), double indemnity (if applied for), privilege to convert at any time up to age 60 to any other form issued, except 10-year term, without reexamination and privilege of paying premiums annually, semiannually, quarterly or monthly.

With the addition of this modern policy contract to the selling kits of Acacia's agency force, it is expected that a decided impetus will be given to new business secured. At the present time Acacia's insurance in force is over $320,000,000. Last year Acacia ranked twenty-sixth in insurance gained and attained the position of thirty-fifth largest of all companies doing business in the United States.

Maj. Waggaman Joins Exchange.

Maj. Ennals Waggaman, president of Waggaman, Brawner & Co., investment banking firm, and vice president and chairman of the board of Waggaman & Brawner, Inc., real estate firm, was elected to membership in the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday, taking the seat held by the late John W. Mr. Booker, a former financial editor of The Washington Post, holds membership in the Washington Stock Exchange as does Myles H. Quail, associated with the firm for the past three years. Mr. Booker is also a director of the District of Columbia Paper Co.

Bond Prices Recede.

The bond market of the Washington Stock Exchange which has been rising throughout the week, receded at yesterday's session where total transactions of $9,000 marked a decline of $1,600 from Wednesday's business. There has been a consistent recession in the stock division throughout the week, yesterday's turnover of 166 shares being the lowest for the period and a decrease of 113 shares from Wednesday's sales.

The largest bond sale was a $3,000 lot of Potomac Electric 6s at 109, last sale price. Sixty shares of Captial Traction led the stock division in volume, selling at a fractional loss from 95½.

Second National Bank has more than doubled its deposits in the past ten years according to a folder being distributed among its depositors describing the institution's growth during that period.

On June 30, 1919, the comptroller's call found its deposits at $3,111,766.11 and the most recent call of June 29 showed them at $6,616,488.09.

New Hercules Stock Offering.

Public offering is being made today of 150,000 shares of stock of the Hercules Motors Corporation, only a small part of which represents new financing by the company. Of the total amount offered 125,000 shares have been purchased from individuals and 25,000 shares were taken from the treasury. The stock is offered by Hornblower & Weeks and W. W. Lanahan & Co., at $30 a share. The company will make application to list the shares on the Chicago Stock Exchange.

Hercules Motors Corporation, organized in 1923, is engaged in the manufacture of four-cylinder and six-cylinder motors for trucks, buses and industrial uses. The company started originally with truck motors, but in recent years it has been developing outlets in various lines of industry, so that now approximately 60 per cent of the output, compared with 16 per cent in 1924, is for agricultural and industrial use.

Surplus Freight Cars.

Class I railroads on July 8 had 204,308 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service.

Today's True Detective Story

By VANCE WYNN

The Single-Trip Ticket

ON August 6, 1890, the police of Rochester, N. Y., learned that Mrs. Desire Day, of that city, was missing from her home.

Friends and relatives declared that she had mysteriously passed out of their lives and that they did not have the faintest idea of her whereabouts.

John C. Hayden, chief of police of Rochester, thought otherwise.

He made an investigation and discovered something that had a direct and most important bearing on the case.

He learned that on Sunday, July 27, 1890, Arthur H. Day, her husband, had gone to Niagara Falls with the missing woman. His sister, Mrs. Mary Day Quigley, was one of the party. The young wife was thrilled with the sight of the falls, and her delight knew no bounds. After viewing the spectacle from the American side, she crossed to the Canadian bank.

She never came back alive.

Strangely enough, Day and his sister returned to Rochester without sounding any alarm over the disappearance of Mrs. Desire Day. No one in the city seemed to notice the fact that Mrs. Day had not returned from her outing. Sad to say, she was not missed.

Curious as it may seem, it was the jealousy of another woman that brought the tragic business to light and put the police on the case.

It became known that on July 6, 1890, just three weeks prior to the fateful trip to Niagara Falls, Day had married a Miss Breen, also of Rochester, the ceremony taking place in Canandaigua, and the woman, of course, being in total ignorance of the fact that he was already married. But in the course of a few weeks Miss Breen discovered the truth and had Day arrested on the charge of bigamy.

It was that arrest that brought out the fact of Mrs. Day's disappearance. Chief Hayden discovered that instead of merely a case of bigamy the thing threatened to assume the proportions of a tragedy. The first clue he gained was the story of the trip to Niagara Falls. And with this came an astounding fact. It was that Day had purchased two round-trip tickets to the falls and one single-trip ticket. The first two were for himself and his sister. The last was for Mrs. Day.

John C. Hayden was convinced that Day was a murderer.

The episode of the tickets satisfied him that the man had gone to Niagara with the deliberate purpose of relieving himself of the embarrassing possession of his first wife.

It was easy to think this, but it was hard to prove it.

The first move that Hayden took in this direction was to induce the sister of Mrs. Day to go to Niagara Falls with him. They crossed the bridge to the Canadian side, and reached the lonely spot near the whirlpool. The never-ending roar of the water seemed to affect Mrs. Quigley. The spray that filled the air formed a mist and suddenly she uttered a cry of horror.

She had seen a face in the mist.

She said it was the face of Mrs. Day. The detective thought it was a hallucination at first, but an investigation disclosed the body of the unfortunate woman. The poor, mangled remains were taken to the morgue and Day was sent for the purpose of identifying the body. At first he declared that it was not that of his wife, but his sister proved to be a damaging, if reluctant, witness against him. The vision of that face in the mist was too much for Mrs. Quigley, who told the truth, and nothing but the truth.

He was formally charged with murdering his wife by pushing her over the bank on to the rocks below. He was tried, convicted and hanged at Wetland, Ont., December 14, 1890.

To Identify Genuine Aspirin

THE increasing use of Bayer Aspirin every year is proof that it has no ill effects. It is the accepted antidote for pain. It always helps; it never harms. Quick relief when you've a headache, or cold; or are suffering from neuralgia or neuritis. Rheumatic pains yield, too, if you'll only give these tablets a chance. But you want genuine Aspirin, so look for the Bayer Cross on every tablet. The box always bears the name Bayer and the word genuine printed in red.

Curb Review

New York, July 18 (A.P.).—Trading on the New York Curb Exchange fell off rather sharply today in reflection of the uneasiness over the weekly Federal Reserve statement, but the main price trend was unmistakably upward, with the utilities again in the forefront of the advance. Brokers' loans increased $58,000,000 to a new high record, but a larger gain was expected in many speculative quarters. Call money dropped from 8 to 7 per cent, and is expected to remain relatively easy until around the end of the month.

Electric Bond & Share, which the Federal Court ruled today is not required to show its books to the Federal Trade Commission, was the spectacular feature in the public utility group, soaring 12 points to a new high record at 148 and retaining most of its gain. The rights advanced 2¼ points to a new top at 10½. Electric Investors sold down to 240 and then rallied to 258 for a net gain of 9 points.

New peak prices for the year also were registered by the Arkansas Natural Gas issues, Cities Service, Cleveland Electric, Commonwealth Edison, Engineers Public Service warrants, Middle West Utilities, National Public Service A, New England Telephone, United Gas Improvement and a few others, some of the gains reaching rather sizeable proportions.

Marconi International Marine was again turned over in large volume, touching a new high at 30⅞. Aluminum Co. of America ran up 13½ points to another new high at 414½. American Chain, General Realty, and Stone & Webster, Inc., also eclipsed their previous high marks, the last-named soaring more than 10 points.

Raybestos-Manhattan, when issued common, representing a merger of the Raybestos Co., the Manhattan Rubber Manufacturing Co. and the United States Asbestos Co., sold between 51 and 52½, closing at the top. More than 92 per cent of the stock of the constituent companies has been deposited under the merger plan.

Grigsby Grunow, in which a powerful pool is reported to have been organized, soared 10 points to a new high record at 206, but lost part of its gain. Guardian Fire Insurance Co. responded to reports of a large increase in earnings by soaring more than 10 points to a new high at 84½ and closing within a point of the top.

Closing quotations also disclosed a rather long assortment of declines of a point or more. Camco preferred and Selberling Rubber sold at new lows for the year.

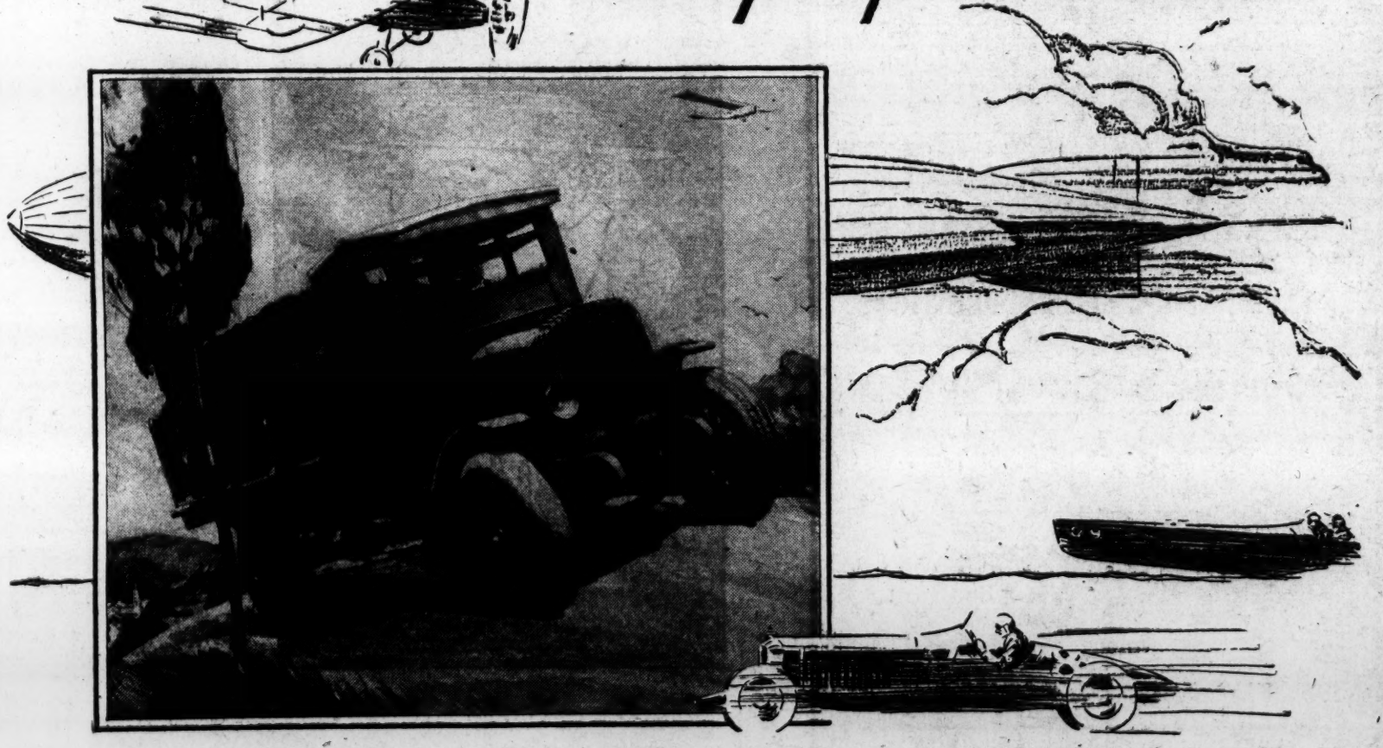
A lowly COAL TRUCK hangs up a record . .



It may not be as exciting as a cross-country flight in an airplane—but this record, made by a coal truck, means something to every car and truck owner!

NINE years ago (a long time in the life of any motor) their heavy-duty Nash truck (loaded with coal) pulled out of the yard of the Fountain Oil, Mill and Fertilizer Co. of Fountain Inn, S. C. for the first time . . . This truck has run every working day since at a total repair expense of LESS THAN $100. "The reason," says O. C. Woods, treasurer, "is that we have used 'Standard' Motor Oil exclusively."

Every day, in automobiles, trucks and buses "Standard" Motor Oil is helping reduce repair bills and prolong motor life. "Standard" Motor Oil is "oilier," specially processed to cling to metal, prevent friction and to stand up longer. Ask for it when you next fill your crankcase. At all "Standard" Service Stations and Dealers.

TODAY'S WOMEN

By EARL MINDERMAN

JULY 19.

MYRNA DOCIA SHARLOW, Chicago Civic Opera Company soprano, was born this day, 1893, in Jamestown, N. Dak. She made a sensational debut when she appeared as a substitute in the role of Mimi for the great Madame Melba at Boston in 1913. The following year she sang with the Royal Opera at Covent Garden, London. Since 1915, she has been with the Chicago Civic Opera Company.

Florence Buck, Unitarian minister, editor and lecturer, was born this day, 1860, in Kalamazoo, Mich. She was educated at the Meadville Theological School and at Manchester College, Oxford University, England. She occupied pulpits in various cities in the United States. She edited the Beacon, a children's paper, and has lectured at teachers' training institutes.

Visit Made In Capital By Jolly Bill

"Uncle" of Children's Hour on WRC Spends Part of Vacation Here — New Ideas to Be Sought in Berlin by F. R. Huber.

Jolly Bill, the old uncle in the radio act which carries children into the land of make-believe each afternoon at 4:30 o'clock over WRC, is spending part of his vacation period in the Capital. Jane stayed in New York this time, but Jolly Bill hopes to bring her here for a week some time this fall, when they will broadcast their half-hour each day from the studios of WRC.

Jane, the radio audience is assured, will not be 10 until October, and goes to school every day from her home in University Heights, New York. She was chosen from about 30 applicants for the act nearly a year ago, and has been on the air regularly since.

On the other hand, Jolly Bill is not a newcomer in radio, having broadcast his first program back in 1923, or thereabouts. He was for a long period connected with a Newark, N. J., station, doing sports announcing, in addition to his newspaper cartoon work. He has been connected with radio in some manner almost continuously since then. Nor has he given up his cartooning. He still devotes half his time to that work.

He usually enters his office about 1:30 or so to prepare the continuity for the afternoon's broadcast. All the sound effects, and many are used in each broadcast, are then worked out. After that everything is at a standstill until Jane arrives, just an hour ahead of the scheduled time for going on the air. Then, if the afternoon journey is to take them to Scotland, Jane must immediately become a Scotch lassie and not forget to roll the "r." Or, should the land to be visited be Ireland, she must become a little Irish girl with a brogue. However, most of the programs are visits to points in fairyland or to American cities.

"Jane is a born actress," according to Jolly Bill, "and it is a great pleasure to work with her."

"Jolly Bill and Jane" plan to continue their adventures on the air indefinitely.

Frederick R. Huber, director of WBAL, Baltimore, plans to sail for Germany August 3. He will visit the largest broadcasting stations in Germany and probably will arrange for another international exchange of programs and musical features similar to the one he arranged in cooperation with one of the largest Scandinavian broadcasters during a visit to Norway in 1927.

He expects to take the trip up the Rhine River and he will visit Berlin, Nuremburg and other cities. He also will attend the Salzburg music festival, which is always one of the outstanding musical events of Europe and attracts musical celebrities and other famous personages from all over the world.

"As Germany has cradled more famous musicians and composers than any other country on the face of the earth, and is generally conceded the musical center of the world, I certainly hope to bring back from there some unique musical ideas and suggestions for the benefit of WBAL's listeners this fall and winter," he said.

Dare Interprets the Mode

Pale, smoky gray georgette and delicate gray lace combine to form this evening dress and wrap. (Courtesy of Jean Magnin, Paris).

THE trimming of the afternoon dress which is becoming steadily more varied and more important, is an art, which receives great attention in the collection of Philippe et Gaston.

One model we saw there recently was what appeared to be, at first glance, a simple afternoon frock of navy blue crepe de chine—yet what artistry of design and workmanship a closer examination of the trimming and ornamentation revealed!

A series of clever zig-zag incrustations about the waist and hips indicate the waistline without precisely defining it—one way of evading the issue as to whether waistlines should be high or low! The skirt, which is slightly longer in the back than in the front, has three series of fine pleats in front, one in the center and two toward the sides. Flaring turn-back cuffs and a narrow stand-up collar are of navy and yellow fabric, cut on the bias, and from the V neckline hangs a pleated circular jabot.

These things sound simple in the telling—but in reality they are the answer to the question, "What is it that makes a Paris gown what it is?" The ingenuity, the taste and the craftsmanship that go into the choice and execution of details—these are perhaps the most important item. The key to Parisian chic is not so much in the general effects as in the details.

Well, she had it bobbed. Thereupon producing the shaggy dog effect, followed by resignation. But the rest of us weren't quite so resigned.

So we bought a certain simple little ten-cents something at a drug store, melted it in hot water, let it cool, and instructed her to soak her stubborn locks with it before going to bed at night. And to——

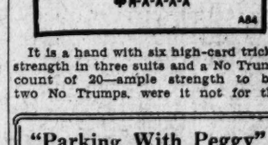
WORK ON BRIDGE

CONTRACT BRIDGE.

A DEALER'S hand of the following type presents a variety of difficulties to an original bidder in contract.



It is a hand with six high-card tricks, strength in three suits and a No Trump count of 20—ample strength to bid two No Trumps, were it not for the menace of the worthless singleton which makes even one No Trump dangerous and two No Trumps extremely so. To bid two of the four-card Spade suit or two of the five-card single-honor Club suit would invite disaster if that suit should become the trump and find partner without adequate support for the bid. On the other hand, with cards of such strength there would be great danger in bidding only one because partner is likely to pass so low a bid, and yet it looks as if there might be game in the combined hands at some declaration.

South's best guess would seem to be two Spades. With length in the Spade suit or exactly normal Spade support and side strength, North would jump South's two Spades to three. If the bidding should be: South two Spades, West pass, North three Spades, East pass; South—although his hand is much stronger than his original bid has shown—should not jump to four Spades. After his partner's jump he would want to play at a game-bid, but his best second-round bid would be three No Trumps; of course the worthless singleton is still there, but the three No Trumps; following North's jump of the original two Spades will tell North that the Spade bid was made with a four-card suit and with No Trump danger in some other suit.

South's second-round three No Trumps will not insure the best contract for the two hands, but it is more apt to produce that result than is a bid of four Spades. With Spade length (four cards), North would bid four Spades over South's three No Trumps; with normal Spade support and side strength, he would pass as the chances for game at No Trump would be better if North had only three Spades and the adversaries had six.

Tales of the Round Table.

V. GAWAIN AND LAUNCELOT.

IN KING ARTHUR'S court was a knight called Gawain who had proved himself of great strength. Some of the other knights wondered whether he could defeat Sir Launcelot; but the two were such close friends that they did not come to serious blows for a long time.

Madly they rode to the clash.

Then came a sad event in which the two brothers of Sir Gawain were killed in a fight between rival bands of knights. Launcelot had been in the band which won the day, but he had not wished to slay Gawain's brothers.

Hearing of the happening, Gawain swore that he would either kill Launcelot or be killed by him. Launcelot tried to avoid the fight by using reason; but Gawain would not listen, and it was seen that blows must come.

The rival knights took their places on opposite sides of a great field. Then they galloped together and struck with such force that both horses fell to the ground.

Leaping free from their steeds, Launcelot and Gawain drew their swords and slashed at each other with might and main. The swords struck so hard at times that there were sparks. Two hours passed, and blood fell from the wounds of both. More wounds were received by Launcelot than by his foe.

Another hour of sword clashing passed, and then Launcelot gave such a mighty blow that Gawain fell to earth, and could not rise.

"Kill me, traitor! Kill me!" cried Gawain.

"No," replied the victorious knight. "I will not kill you—I am Launcelot."

As a result of this fight—which could have been avoided if he had used reason—Gawain lay helpless and near the door of death for more than a month. He recovered, however, and later spoke of Sir Launcelot as a noble knight.

What Today Means to You

"CANCER."

IF July 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 5:30 a. m. to 8 a. m., from 3 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. and from 8 p. m. to 9:15 p. m.; the danger periods are from 1 p. m. to 2 p. m. and from 6 p. m. to 7 p. m.

Everything augurs well for this date. The influences will be invigorating and beneficient. Association with those who can help you in your task, whatever it may be, is promised, and success in your ventures is assured. It behooves one and all to take full advantage of the prevailing conditions.

Children born July 19 will possess the unhappy "penchant" for getting even, and this trait will pursue them until long after they have passed the stage of youth. On the other hand, they will, although bitter enemies, be loyal friends. A revengeful attitude promises to cramp their style and to cause a stagnation of productive effort.

You, as yet, have not found yourself, nor your particular niche in life. It is hard for you to stay put. You have a good mind, but you become engrossed in a number of trivial things instead of concentrating upon one thing of great interest and value. There is no motivating desire drawing you on toward a definite goal.

It is not difficult for you to make friends, and you create a good first impression. When your enthusiasm is fresh you are very confident yourself, and you really gain the confidence of others. Your good beginnings could lead into good endings, if you could anchor your interests to a place or thing.

The first part of your life will be one of ever-changing experiences, and a great deal of superficial enjoyment. You will become more practical with the passing of the years, and your material harvest will be reaped rather late in life. You are destined to have your share of heartaches, but they will sweeten and strengthen your character. You will never be felled by your hard knocks. Grousing and self pity are not in your category of faults. If you do not marry too early in life, there is a great deal of happiness in store for you, and you will make a real understanding, sympathetic pal for someone.

CONFUSED TRADING & UNSTEADIES PRICES

STEEL SHARES ARE FIRM

New York, July 18 (A.P.).— Price trends were confusingly irregular in today's stock market, as traders approached the Thursday evening brokerage loan statement with a cautiousness which contrasted markedly with the confidence with which bullish operations have been pressed in the face of rising loans in recent weeks.

As had seemed inevitable, the loan compilation, published after the close of the market, disclosed a new all-time record for loans placed through Federal Reserve member banks of $5,813,000,000, an increase of $58,000,000 during the week, and $20,000,000 above the previous record figure of March 20.

Although the stock exchange's monthly compilation of total exchange member borrowings showed a new peak above $7,000,000,000 at the end of June, and caused little concern in speculative circles, a new top in Federal Reserve loans at this time is viewed with considerable apprehension, as it may be an unsettling development at a time when traders have begun to grow uneasy over the market's technical position, after the remarkable advance since May.

Call Money Eases to 7 Per Cent.

The Federal Reserve condition statements failed to clarify the clouded credit situation. Call money eased from 8 to 7 per cent today, but the statements showed that the New York banks had still met with little success in reducing their indebtedness at the Federal Reserve, borrowings totaling $325,000,000, a reduction of only $16,000,000. The Reserve system however, showed a moderate gain in holdings of Government securities and a slight increase in acceptances bought in the open market. Whether these increases indicated that the system was beginning to help credit by open market operations in preparation for the stop-moving season, or represented only special and temporary purchases, Wall street was left to ponder.

Business news continued largely favorable, with additional earnings statements appearing. Youngstown Sheet and Tube earned $10.12 per common share in the first half, compared to only $3.66 in the like period of last year. Large purchases of railway equipment were announced. United Aircraft further rounded out its integration by acquiring Sikorsky.

Steel Shares are Firm.

Steel shares were firm, U. S. Steel selling up more than four points, but losing part of its gain before the close. Republic reached a new peak, in response to yesterday's earnings statement. Commercial solvents continued to soar, reaching a new peak at 492, up 12 points. Johns Manville made an extreme gain of about nine points on persistent merger rumors.

Yale and Towne and Cutler Hammer were other issues reaching new highs in response to favorable earnings statements. Radio rallied about three points in what appeared to be a driving in of shorts. Macy was bid up five points on earnings prospects as result of expansion.

Several of the utilities were again heavily bought, United Corporation rising more than three points to within a few points of its best price, and North American and Public Service of New Jersey penetrating further into new high territory. Rails were generally depressed, but Wheeling and Lake Erie jumped over eighteen points to a new top in a small turnover.

Declines Generally Small.

Declines were generally held to a few points. International Business Machines and Case Threshing dropped about 5 points, Western Union and Auburn Auto 4, Allegheny Corporation, Allied Chemical, American International, Atchison, Chesapeake & Ohio, Postum Co. and Southern Railway were among issues losing 2 to 3 points.

In the commodity markets, grains met a setback, as profit taking in wheat was prompted by reports of better weather in Argentine. Closing prices were 3 cents a bushel and more lower.

Corn sold off about 2 cents. Cotton reacted for a time, but closed fairly steady.

Foreign exchanges were marked by a sharp rally in the Canadian dollar, reducing the discount to one-fifth of a cent. Sterling cables fell back one-eighth of a cent, to $4.85 1-16 Japanese yen lost about one-third of a cent in profit taking on the recent advance.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, July 18 (A.P.).—Eleventh-hour speculative buyers of wheat today met with a Waterloo. Especially was this the experience of those who either had scanty financial resources, or who lacked nerves of steel. Huge selling, largely to realize profits for purchasers that began three days or weeks ago when crop disaster in the Northwest was much less apparent, sent the market tumbling wildly after scoring new price bulges to above any point heretofore reached this season.

Wheat closed unsteady around the day's bottom figures, 2¾c to 3½c a bushel under yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1½c to 2¼c lower, oats ¾c to 1¾c off and provisions unchanged to 10¢ 12c advance.

Sever jolts to friends of higher prices for wheat came with staggering force right at the outset today and again just before the market here closed. Unlooked for sudden early downturns of Liverpool quotations were accompanied by word of rains giving relief from drought affecting crops in Argentina. Consequent breaks here amounted to about 4c a bushel, but renewal of damage complaints from Canada and the American Northwest halated the market speedily to 6c above where downturns were checked. Besides, later reports from Argentine said moisture had been decidedly insufficient, and the Liverpool market closed at an advance, while estimates current regarding Canadian crop damage went to a point where some first-hand observers put the 1929 yield of wheat in the prairie provinces this season as low as 175,000,000 bushels, about one-third of last year's harvest.

It was upon this character of disconcerting news that enthusiasts on the buying side of the wheat market rushed prices so high that profit-taking sales became of overwhelming volume and smashed values down in earnest. The fresh plunge that resulted was given constant additional impetus by execution of standing orders to let go of scantily margined holdings at various set limits, and thus put a stop to losses as the market crashed downward. The wild descent of values was hastened also by talk that if Argentina, Australia and Europe should prove to have bountiful harvests, the misfortunes to wheat in Canada and neighboring American States may not be so seriously felt as many traders have feared. No export business whatever in wheat today was in evidence.

Corn and oats weakened with wheat and on account of favorable weather for corn growth. However, a temporary advance when wheat was strong carried the corn market up the first time this season to $1 a bushel for December delivery, representing the new 1929 corn crop.

LOUGHRAN TOYS WITH BRADDOCK, WINNING DECISION

Almost the Naked Truth

By JAMES S. COLLINS.

NEW YORK, July 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Quite a sizable load will rest upon the stalwart shoulders of Ben Hedges, the versatile Princeton athlete, in the international meet on Travers Island Saturday when Cornell and Princeton engage Oxford and Cambridge. Hedges will carry the American colors in four of the twelve events on the program—the high jump, pole vault, broad jump and high hurdles. The Blond Tiger has equaled or bettered the meet records in all of these events except the broad jump.

Competing in the latter event in the Cornell and Yale meets, he was returned a winner both times, jumping 22 feet 5½ inches against the Blue. In the high jump, he seems to stand head and shoulders above the field he will face Saturday, since he has been clearing the bar at 6 feet 2, 3 or 4 consistently. His performance of 15 seconds flat in the high hurdles stamps him as the fastest man entered in that event, although it is no certainty that he will defeat Mann, of Cambridge. In the pole vault, Hedges has topped 12 feet 6 inches, a height none of the British entries ever has attained.

Hedges Learned How to Jump From Book.

Hedges not only won the intercollegiate A. A. championship as a high jumper, but he was runner-up to a teammate in the intercollegiate diving championship. In his prep school days at Loomis Institute, he was a four-letter man, excelling in football, baseball and basket ball as well as track.

Young Mr. Hedges bears all the earmarks of a born athlete, but he does not consider himself one.

"I was not born with the ability to jump," he declares. "I learned how to jump by reading a book. Yes, sir, a book. It was written by Dick Landon, the Yale and Olympic high jumper. I learned a lot about high jumping from that book that I never would have picked up myself by jumping in the back yard of my home in Plainfield."

Hedges first came into athletic prominence in the Olympic games at Amsterdam last year, when he finished second to Bob King in the high jump. His great showing was one of the greatest surprises of the games, since he barely made the Olympic, being the fourth and last high jumper selected. After the games at Amsterdam he tied for first place in the high jump in the international meet at Sunford Bridge, London, clearing 6 feet 4½ inches, along with King and Harold Osborn.

Minor League Baseball Not Flourishing.

Upon his return to this country he won the high jump in the Junior A. A. U. championships at Travers Island by clearing the same height. His outstanding performance this year was in the Princeton-Yale meet when he won three out of four events and set new series records in two of them. He did not compete in the A. A. U. championships at Denver, preferring to continue his summer studies at Princeton and prepare for the severe task he has set for himself for next Saturday.

Indications multiply that minor league baseball is not flourishing. In an effort to stimulate enthusiasm, the Nashua Club of the New England League gave free admission to all comers the other day. The Lynn Club of the same circuit advertised free admission to a game last Sunday, but it rained. It may yet be necessary for these and other minor league clubs to pay the fans to attend the games.

In singing Benny Friedman, former Michigan captain, to lead the team next fall, the New York Football Giants have acquired just about the handiest man in the gridiron trade. As captain of the Detroit Bulldogs last season Friendman was a great attraction here and his presence in the Giant line-up will have a beneficial effect at the box office as well as on the field.

Mangin Beats Shields at Brookline

G. U. Star Gains Semi-finals Winning in 5-Set Match.

Mercur, Doeg, Hall Other Survivors in Invitation Play.

BROOKLINE, Mass., July 18 (A. P.).—Two players still in college ranks, the recent winner of the National Clay Court singles championship and the man ranking seventh in the national listing are the four who will meet here tomorrow in the semifinal round of the 37th annual Longwood Bowl singles championship. Two of the men, Fritz Mercur, Bethlehem, Pa., No. 7 nationally, and John Doeg, of Stanford University, have each won one leg on the historic cup. The other two, Gregory Mangin, of Georgetown University, and J. Gilbert Hall, of Orange, N. J., clay courts champion, met stiffer opposition today and yet remain serious threats.

In a hard-fought five-set match Mangin, recent finalist in the national intercollegiates, defeate Frank X. Shields, of New York, national junior champion, 6—0, 6—3, 6—8, 0—6, 6—4. In the fourth set Shields fell and apparently injured his right knee but he continued the match.

Hall, recently winner at Indianapolis of the national clay court singles, dropped one set in a hard-hitting duel with H. H. Hyde, of Hartford, Conn., last New England representative in the tournament. The scores were 6—2, 3—6, 6—2, 6—3. The one unseeded player to reach the quarter-finals, Weller Evans, of Orange, N. J., former Princeton net man, offered little opposition to the speedy services and cut strokes of Doeg, Stanford University sophomore. Doeg won, 6—2, 6—2, 6—2. Mercur put out Sadekozu Onda, of Japan, ranking nineteenth nationally, 6—3, 9—7, 6—2.

Mary Greef Defeated In Net Upset.

One upset marked the women's singles in the quarter final round. Mary Greef, of Kansas City, who sprang a surprise in defeating Sarah Palfrey, of Brooklyn, yesterday fell before Mrs. Lawrence Harper, of San Francisco, Calif., 6—4, 6—2.

In the semifinals of the men's play tomorrow, Mercur will meet Hall and the two collegians, Doeg and Mangan, are to face each other. In the women's play, Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., will meet Margaret Blake, of Brookline, and Mrs. Harper will oppose Ethel Burkhardt, of San Francisco.

Dorothy Andrus, Stamford, Conn., defeated Josephine Cruickshank, Santa Anna, Calif., 6—3, 6—2. Ethel Burkhardt, San Francisco, defeated Clara Greenspaw, New York City, 6—1, 9—7.

In the women's doubles quarterfinal round, Miss Anna and Sarah Palfrey, Brookline, defeated Mrs. A. H. Chapin, jr., Springfield, and Mary Greef, Kansas City, 6—1, 8—10, 6—2. Mrs. L. A. Harper, San Francisco, and Josephine Cruickshank, Santa Ana, Calif. defeated Mrs. J. B. Corbiere and Mrs. Henry R. Guild, of Boston, 6—2, 6—0.

Marjorie Gladman, Santa Ana, Calif., and Alice Francis, Orange, N. J., defeated Mrs. W. M. Sheddon and Mrs. J. L. Bremer, of Boston, 6—3, 6—2.

In the men's doubles quarterfinal round, Bradshaw Harrison, San Bruno, Calif., and Kenneth Appel, Orange, N. J., defeated G. P. Gardner jr., and H. R. Guild, both of Brookline, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3.

George Considine Wins Playground Net Title

The finals of both the senior and junior tennis tournaments, played yesterday at the Plaza playgrounds, brought forth some sterling play as the young racqueters vied for supremacy. George Considine, captain and No. 1 player at Gonzaga, annexed the 18-year-old title by trouncing Jake Chernikoff, Eastern High netman, in a spirited encounter, 6—3, 6—2. Johnny Mehan retained his junior crown but only after the stiffest of competition from Max Goldstein by a score of 6—3, 8—6. Mr. McCarthy, athletic director, refereed both matches.

Speculators Reap Harvest On U. S.-German Net Play

Tickets Bring 5 Times Face Value as Stars Clash Today.

BERLIN, July 18 (A.P.).—On the eve of the opening of the Davis Cup matches between America and Germany speculators had no difficulty getting three, four and five times the printed price for seats around the Red and White Club court where the interzone finals start tomorrow afternoon.

Members of the two teams were satisfied with light workouts today. Frank Hunter, of the American delegation, decided not to take any exercise. Bill Tilden had a short practice session in the morning and the energetic doubles match of Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn banged the ball back and forth this afternoon for two hours until a thunderstorm drove them off the court.

The Germans, in their methodical way, went through the tennis "daily dozen" and those who watched Daniel Prenn and Hans Moldenhauer, who are to represent the Fatherland in doubles as well as singles, were not at all pessimistic over Germany's chances to win one or two of the five matches.

In the opening singles matches tomorrow Tilden opposes Moldenhauer and Hunter meets Prenn. On Saturday the American veterans will have a chance to rest while their young countrymen, Van Ryn and Allison, tackle Prenn and Moldenhauer in the doubles.

The optimistic Prenn is already looking forward to Sunday when the first day's pairings are reversed and he is trying conclusions with Tilden while Hunter matches strokes with Moldenhauer.

Lacoste, Ill, Is Lost To French Cup Team

Paris, July 18 (A.P.).—Rene Lacoste, who is suffering from a severe cold, was slightly improved tonight, but the chances are very slim that he will be able to resume his place in the Davis Cup challenge round here July 26, 27 and 28.

Pierre Gillou, captain of the French team, now intends to play Henri Cochet and Jean Borotra in singles, the same pair making up the doubles team unless Borotra experiences a long, hard struggle in the first singles, in which case Cochet and Jacques Brugnon would be chosen.

Regardless of whether the United States or Germany is to be the opposing nation, France is looking forward without undue nervousness to the challenge round here. The betting is 4 to 1 that France retains the cup.

"I fail to see any one in the tennis world capable of beating Cochet this year if he maintains his present form," Gillou said.

Walberg Returns to Form; Five Detroit Errors Figure.

DETROIT, July 18 (A.P.).—George Walberg regained his cunning today, and the Athletics stopped the Tigers by 8 to 4 in the first game of the series. The Mackmen increased their lead to eight and one-half games as the Yankees were idle in a Cleveland rainstorm. George Uhle went the route for the Tigers, yielding seventeen hits. Uhle was handicapped by five Detroit errors, but the Athletics hit it enough runs to win.

Walberg eased up a bit in the ninth, and the home boys got three runs which they probably would have failed to score had not the Macks been indifferent to the advancing of runners.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 18 (A.P.).—Ace Elliott, one of Shotton's rookie hurlers, went the full distance against Cincinnati today and Philadelphia won the opening game of the series, 6-4. Opposed to Elliott was Jakie May, but the Reds southpaw was a trifle wild and issued six passes. The Phillies combined these with eight hits to win the ball game.

Jacobs Brothers Win In Midatlantic Tennis

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, July 18.—Eddie and Billy Jacobs advanced to the finals in the Middle Atlantic doubles tournament this afternoon at the Baltimore Country Club by defeating Eric Jacobsen and George Hebner in straight sets. These scores were 6—4, 6—2, 6—2.

The other semifinal match will be played tomorrow afternoon. This will bring together Dooley L. Mitchell and Gwynn King, of Washington, and John A. Magee and Warren K. Magruder, of Baltimore. The finals will be played Saturday afternoon.

The victory today was the third time in the tourney that the Jacobs brothers won in straight sets over their opponents. So far they have won 54 games and lost only 15.

Close students of the game predict that the Jacobs entry will carry off the championship honors.

In the match today Eddie continued his sensational service. In the seven games he served he won 28 points and two love games, and allowed only one point in the other five. Three of the five were double faults. The other two were due to Billy netting the ball and then driving over the base line after a volley.

FEAR QUIETED IN GRIFFITH ILLNESS

Hardy Condition Aids Nats' Owner After Operation.

Special to The Washington Post.

Griffith's progress is entirely satisfactory to Dr. Charles F. Sawyer, the operating surgeon, who allayed fears for the baseball magnate's life by the declaration that Griffith's hardy physique despite his 59 years was aiding him greatly in his fight against the gangrenous infection that was harmed.

The arrival of Mrs. Griffith and his adopted daughter, Thelma Griffith this afternoon heartened the owner of the Nats greatly. They were at the bedside today with Edward B. Eynon, secretary of the Washington club, who has been in constant attendance. Hospital officials were busy replying to queries as to the progress of Mr. Griffith, whose room was strewn with flowers although visitors were not admitted with the exception of his family and Mr. Eynon.

Spends Comfortable Night, Sleeping Five Hours.

Dr. Sawyer paid tribute to Griffith's physical condition despite his years and announced that the magnate had spent a comfortable night, sleeping about five hours. On account of the injection of a tube to hasten drainage of the infection, Griffith's recovery will be a bit retarded, Dr. Sawyer said.

Mr. Griffith was able to greet his visitors today and was in a cheerful mood as he contemplated his recovery. "We're both down now," he found the humor to remark in referring to his ball team.

Chisox Beat Red Sox, 2-1, in 10th; Faber Star

Chicago, Ill., July 18 (A.P.).—Red Faber limited the Red Sox to five hits in ten innings today and the White Sox won the opener of the series 2-1. It was Faber's eighth victory of the season. Chicago scored the winning run in the tenth when Metzler and Reynolds singled, Shires was purposely passed and Danny Macfayden passed Kamm to force Metzler across the plate. Macfayden issued five walks, but was otherwise effective in the pinches. Faber struck out eight Red Sox.

Schmeling-Sharkey Fight Draws Bids From 4 Cities

NEW YORK, July 18 (A.P.).—Several sites are still under consideration for the Max Schmeling-Jack Sharkey heavyweight fight in September and no definite decision has yet been reached, William F. Carey, president of Madison Square Garden, declared today in taking cognizance of reports the fight would be held at Soldier Field, Chicago.

"We understand George F. Getz and other Chicago sportsmen are prepared to offer Soldier Field as a site for the bout, but have not yet had any direct word from them," said Mr. Carey.

The Garden executive indicated Boston, Detroit or Windsor, Canada, were the most favored of available locations, but added plans were still unsettled.

San Diego, Calif., July 18 (A.P.).—Tentative plans for bringing Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling into the ring at Agua Caliente, Mexico, for a fifteen-round bout, with Jack Dempsey playing the role of promoter, were discussed at the Mexican town yesterday.

Wirt C. Bowman and James W. Crofton, sportsmen and officials of the Agua Caliente Company, together with Dempsey and his former manager, Gene Normille, were closeted in the Mexican resort town near here with Abelardo Rodriguez, governor of the northern district of lower California.

It was reported that preliminary plans for such a bout were discussed and that the conference would continue today. Dempsey left here for Los Angeles last night to be with his wife, Estelle Taylor, actress, who was to undergo a minor operation today.

Jones Injured As Nats Beat Browns

Special to The Washington Post.

ST LOUIS, Mo., July 18.—The price of victory for Walter Johnson's sixth place Nats came high today in defeating the Browns in the opening game of the final Western skirmish, 10-3. Samuel Jones, regaining the form that made him the leading pitcher for the Griffs last year, was cut down with a line drive during the thick of the battle and may not be able to resume operations on the pitching knob for at least a week.

Jones expressed severe pain in his right elbow after he was removed and it is probable an X-ray will be taken to determine whether any bones are broken.

Jones was working smoothly in blanking the Browns for five innings. Facing McGowan, the opening batter in the sixth, Jones saw a slow curve whistle back at him. Through the natural instinct Samuel threw up his right arm, but the ball instead of sailing out to center field for a clean single, bumped Jones' right elbow. Jones leaped for the ball like a cat but was unable to send a perfect throw to first and McGowan owned a single and Samuel a badly bruised arm.

Jones Wanted to Stay In the Game.

Although he wanted to continue in the game, Jones was removed by Johnson after several warm up pitches to Benny Tate, and Fred Marberry went to the hill.

The Nationals were on the receiving end of three successive donations from a rookie named Eddie Roetz at shortstop as he booted grounders that gave a run in the first, again in the second and once more in the third. After Judge was thrown out by Melillo, Rice was safe on Roetz's fumble, stole second on a third strike to Goslin and scored on Myer's double. Tate flied to McGowan.

Cronin drew a pass in the second and was forced by West. Roetz then fumbled Hayes roller. Jones fanned, but Boss, batting for Judge, singled West across.

Goslin opened the third with a single. Myer fanned. Tate was safe on Roetz's third error. A pass to Cronin filled the bases and West's sacrifice fly to McGowan allowed Goslin to score. While this was going on Jones was taking care of the Browns with ease. George Blaeholder also tightened for three innings because the Nats neglected to roll any grounders in the direction of shortstop.

Marberry Finishes Game for Jones.

After Jones was removed, Marberry took up the pitching. Manush was retired on a fly to Goslin. Schulte fanned. Roetz singled past Myer. O'Rourke walked to fill the bases and Melillo scored a pair with a single to center.

The Nats, however, refused to stand without hitching and blew themselves a delicious rally in the lucky seventh. It was lucky. An even dozen batters

CHALLENGER GIVEN RING LESSON AND SOUND THRASHING IN FUTILE BID TO LIFT LIGHTHEAVY CROWN

Loughran Outboxes Hard-Hitting Foe in 15 Rounds.

TOMMY LOUGHRAN.

NEW YORK, July 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The light-heavyweight champion of the world, Tommy Loughran, of Philadelphia, after sampling the punches of his heavy-hitting challenger, James J. Braddock, of New Jersey, in the first round of their fifteen-round title bout in the Yankee Stadium tonight, settled down to steady boxing in the succeeding rounds and proceeded to give James a boxing lesson.

After the first round, Braddock might just as well have left his right-hand punch in the dressing room for all the good it did him. The first round was the most exciting of the contest. In this round Braddock lanced the champion's left eye with a vicious right hook before fifteen seconds had elapsed. Blood trickled, then streamed from this gash until the end of the round.

After this it was all Loughran. He outboxed his man, got away from his right leads and jabbed and jabbed until he had poor Braddock thoroughly discouraged.

Cuts Braddock's Nose and Eye in Third Round.

In the fifth and sixth rounds, Loughran set his own pace by pecking away with his left jab and keeping Braddock at a safe distance all the time.

In the sixth round Braddock once got himself all set, cocked his right hand, measured the champion carefully, and then shot over what he hoped would be the winning punch. But a fraction of a second after the punch started, Tommy had ducked gracefully under it and it swished over his head like a stray comet.

Champion Seeks Knockout In Third Round.

In the seventh round Tommy cut loose himself and came closer to landing a knockout than Braddock ever came. The champion suddenly shifted his tactics, and lashed out with a one-two punch, the left crashing first on the right side of Jimmy's chin and the right following it immediately to the left side of the Braddock jaw. Jimmy tottered, then wobbled and then started to sag at the knees, but with an effort, he steadied himself and seizing Loughran in a clinch he butted Tommy accidentally on the forehead. This butt cut a gash high on Tommy's forehead and it bled copiously. This bothered the champion throughout this round.

There was not much to the rest of the fight after this. It was all rather monotonous in its repetition. It was simply a case of jabbing, jabbing and making Braddock miss. Jimmy would have been able to fight no doubt except every time he got started or tried to get started he found that left of

FIGHT BY ROUNDS

ROUND ONE—Loughran led with his left jab and handled the challenger easily in a clinch. The champion came out of the mix-up with a nasty gash over his left eye. Blood streamed from the cut. It seemed to spirit the champion into action and the fight began at a fast clip. Braddock smashed a hard right to Tommy's head, but missed two swings. Loughran kept jabbing with his left, but was unable to keep the challenger from coming in close with a body attack. They were in a clinch at the bell.

ROUND TWO—They swapped punches in the center of the ring and clinched. The champion fought carefully, showing a healthy respect for Braddock's right. Tommy slipped and only a clinch saved him from slipping to the floor as he dodged Jimmy's charge. The challenger was forcing the fight, but missed often as he landed. Braddock landed an overhand right to the head as he forced the champion into a corner. Loughran went back on his heels from a solid left to the head just before the gong sounded.

ROUND THREE—Loughran boxed and jabbed as he sought to stop Braddock's doggedly persistent rushes. The challenger started a fresh flow of blood from the cut over Tommy's eye and gave the champion both ears in a livid mix-up. Loughran's defensive tactics slowed up the fight. Loughran backed up against the ropes. Loughran shook his head and smashed Braddock solidly about head. One of the champion's jabs opened a cut on Braddock's nose just before the end of the round.

ROUND FIVE—Braddock drove a right hook to the ribs and repeated with an uppercut that landed under Tommy's heart. They spent a lot of time clinching at close quarters, the champion clearly outgeneraling the young Jersey man. Loughran smashed a series of rights to the jaw and took a light left to the body as he side-stepped Braddock's counter-attack. Tommy's left seemed to puzzle the challenger, but he connected to the champion's jaw with a hard overhand right. Loughran hooked his left to the body as the round ended.

ROUND SIX—Braddock came out of his corner with head lowered to open a determined charge. He forced the champion about the ring, but found difficulty connecting. Loughran side-stepped and jabbed to upset the challenger's rushes. Repeatedly he threw Jimmy off balance and punished the challenger about head at close range. Braddock was buffeted around, but kept up the pursuit. One of Loughran's sharp lefts opened a cut at the side of Braddock's right eye. The champion had his young rival in a bad way at the bell.

ROUND SEVEN—They came out for action and both patched up eyes. The champion drove several hard lefts and rights to Braddock's head and blocked the challenger's counter. Loughran had Braddock backing away from his two-fisted drive. Just when Loughran appeared to have Jimmy in distress another severe cut was opened by a glancing blow to the champion's forehead. In a twinkling Tommy's face was a mass of blood. Loughran backed away and appeared half blinded by the stream, but he had a smile left as he came to his corner at the end of the round.

ROUND EIGHT—Loughran came out to set a fast pace. He first was fighting with a succession of sharp clouts to the challenger's head and the crowd was in an uproar. The champion had Braddock missing badly. They clinched after exchanging lefts to the body. Tommy took a left smack to the head, but cuffed Jimmy around the ring. The champion handled his young rival as a master would his pupil. Braddock was taking a scientific boxing lesson at the bell.

ROUND NINE—Loughran lost no time poking his efficient left hand into the challenger's face. Jimmy did not seem discouraged, but apparently realized that his main chance was to connect with his right, providing he could find the target. Loughran outsmarted the challenger at every turn, but Jimmy kept boring in. One of Braddock's blows started the blood flowing again slightly from the champion's cut head. The challenger absorbed two stiff lefts to the head and had his counter blows plucked out of the air. Braddock missed an overhand right by a foot and the crowd groaned as the round ended.

ROUND TEN—Jimmy came out with determination written all over his face. The challenger worked both fists to the body, forcing the champion to a clinch. Loughran brought his defensive tactics into play to check Braddock's lunges. He brought Jimmy up short once and then again with right uppercuts. Loughran picked off most of Braddock's blows and put the challenger repeatedly off balance by clever use of his left. They were sparring at the bell.

ROUND ELEVEN—Braddock plunged right back in where he left off, still hunting for Loughran's chin. Instead his own was clipped by a right uppercut. Jimmy was smiling after taking several light blows to the face. After being handled easily in a series of clinches, Braddock gestured to the champion to "Come on and fight." Loughran responded with a pair of stiff wallops to the head. Jimmy forced the champion into the ropes, but took enough time out to answer several loud-voiced ringside critics. They broke from a clinch at the bell.

ROUND TWELVE—Braddock stalked the champion about the ring without getting much satisfaction. The champion, realizing the big man he had piled up on points, took no chances and stayed strictly on the defensive. The crowd clapped for action and got clinches. Tommy danced in and out of his rival's reach, meanwhile massaging the challenger with his left. The champion fired both hands to the Jersey boy's head and ducked a vicious left just as the bell sounded.

ROUND THIRTEEN—Braddock bored back into a flurry of blows. The crowd yelled as the champion speared Jimmy with his left and skipped out of the challenger's reach. Tommy was content to spar and clinch, but took one to the face. The champion waded in for a moment with both hands punishing Braddock about the body, but there was comparatively little action. Loughran was in complete command of the situation and stood Jimmy off easily with well-directed jabs as the round ended.

ROUND FOURTEEN—Braddock plunged in with a body attack and

MABLA, GAME FILLY, WINS 7TH STRAIGHT AT EMPIRE

Star of Loft's Stable Beats Favorite

Joe Marrone III Wins Feature Race From Friar Cliff.

NEW YORK, July 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Mabla is the marvel of racing. The small but compact daughter of On Watch—Sox is a perfect piece of horse machinery. She won her seventh straight purse in the last event at Empire City today and the crowd showed its appreciation of her speed, honesty and gameness with a wild, unrestrained outburst of shouts and cheers which could not have been more enthusiastic and spontaneous over the victory of Blue Larkspur in a turf classic.

This time she was pitted against at least two colts with some pretensions to stake quality—Peto and Wrestler. The latter was the favorite at even money on the strength of his third to Mokatam in the East View Stakes last Saturday when he forced the early pace. Mabla was held at 2 to 1, a generous price as it turned out and she did not lack for followers. Some turned from her on the theory that she could not go on winning forever. These had reasons for regret. Her seventh victory in a run was quite as convincing as her first. George W. Loft owns a mighty sweet filly.

Mabla Off Third in Tangle, But Opens a Gap.

The barrier did not work properly and Peto beat the start with Wrestler next and Mabla third. With none the best of it the filly ran around the other two and opened a gap going off the back stretch which she held to the end although roused once or twice with the whip as extra insurance. Wrestler did the chasing and was soundly beaten, while Peto was not even close.

Friar Cliff, an added starter in the Melrose stakes, gave those who wagered on Joe Marrone III at odds-on, a mighty scare. Going up the backstretch it did not look as if he could be caught, but the horse bore out rounding the far turn at the cost of three or four lengths and finally tired from his early effort so that the top-heavy favorite, under a patient ride by Jimmy Burke, came away in the stretch to win easily and to earn $2,790 for Mrs. T. R. Queen. It was the third victory for the 7-year-old horse in four starts.

Buxton, on Negopoli, Wins Second of Day.

It looked to many as if the Jadell Stable's Laurte got up in time to be second, but Friar Cliff just lasted on the word of the judges.

Clarence Buxton, who saddled the first winner of the afternoon, counted on scoring a double with Negopoli in this race, but the horse was last and a far distant trailer most of the way.

No whit discouraged, he tried to make his double with the Mapleton Stud's Supawana in the fifth event and once again was doomed to disappointment. This time a fast work fooled him. The gelding finished third, but was second best. Catrone had her far outside all the way at the expense of much lost ground.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

BY BERT E. COLLYER

PAGAN LADDIE.

Well, boys, here comes the devil. All prettied up and rearin' to go. Yep, the Keene representative just needed that last effort to tune him up. Was right bang up the first part, but hung and tired a bit at the end. The price will be right. SCARLET BRIGADE, which finished second last time, is a contender, with PRINCETON having an outside chance to spill the frijoles. There also was some "talk"—you know the kind I mean—relative to ALAYER, which has been working well in private. You have the info. For what it is worth.

ARMANZADA is another real "hot" thing—from the "dynamitors." Will have a good stout rider in the pilot house today and may reward with CALCITE and PERJURY in close attendance.

MACHETE looks like an eagle bird—over the mile course—a third on the card. Fair sort of hide and that last winning effort was a trifle better than cold dope would indicate.

Sammy Holman will send the good BLANC SEING right back in the sixth. This is one of the most consistent horses in training, and this notwithstanding the ride given by Pichon recently. BANSET is the contender but I believe he is a bit "high" here. And now I slip you the clockers' diamond special—ELFIN STAR—from away down deep in the old vat. Boys, let your conscience be your guide.

Over at Dorval, where the boys have been slipping you four and five winners every day, the happy chatter is none other than MORTRUE. This is the trick Buxton took over there for Ben Block. Was left at the post last time, but, from what I know, will be on the Bill Daily end today. Now, unless you're solid ivory—from the shoulders up—you will have the old two megs riding right smack bang on the old beezer. Ye' wekkum.

THEO FAY, breaking fast from extreme outside, raced close up on the outside to the stretch where, under energetic handling, he drew out handily. TOMMY TICKLE, off in a hurry, closed fast all the way up gradually and finished second. CHAFF, away to a good start from the start, weakened slightly in the final drive. FRED PARKER displayed speed while racing on the inside in close quarters during early stages, but tired in the final drive. GRIFF W. raced prominently throughout. CHAMP BEATS BRADDOCK EASILY

Tommy Laughs at Rage Of Challenger.

Whenever Braddock would crowd Tommy into the ropes or into a corner, where it looked as if the champion were in a bad position, Tommy boxed his way out and placed the challenger on the spot he himself had just vacated.

In the last two rounds, Braddock, realizing that his only chance to win was by a knockout, tried to tear after Tommy, but the latter proved so elusive that Jimmy in a rage beckoned for him to come on in. This got a horse laugh from Loughran.

The fight proved that Tommy Loughran still is the king among the lightheavy boxers. Braddock lacked the experience and the ring knowledge to cope successfully with the title holder.

The champion weighed 174 pounds, while the challenger weighed 170 pounds.

A crowd of about 25,000 sat in on the proceedings.

In the ten-round semifinal put on after the main bout because of a threat of rain early in the evening, the veteran New York middleweight, Dave Shade, scored a surprisingly decisive victory over Rene Devos, hard-hitting Belgian. The crouching, bobbing Shade outboxed and outpunched his rival consistently. Each weighed 159½.

NEW BOAT BODY TO SPONSOR PRESIDENT'S CUP RACE

$10,000 Fund Is Goal of Group

Chesapeake - Potomac Association Hopes to Stage Regatta.

To Start Drive for Money for Races on Potomac in Sept.

A CONCERTED effort to revive the President's Cup Regatta is being made by the newly organized Chesapeake and Potomac Power Boat Association, which has taken over the promotion of motor boat racing in this vicinity.

At a meeting of the association members and local civic leaders at the City Club yesterday, it was voted that the association would sponsor the regatta and attempt to raise $10,000 by subscription to defray the expense of staging the event. September 13 and 14 are the dates selected.

The President's Cup Regatta, inaugurated in 1926 and renewed in 1927, was not held last year. The Corinthian Yacht Club, under the auspices of which the regatta was held the two years previous, did not resume the sponsoring role. Until the Chesapeake and Potomac Power Boat Association was organized this year there was no prospect that the regatta would be renewed in 1929.

Will Ask Contributions From Public.

The same group which met yesterday will gather again within a few days to discuss organization of committees to carry out preparations for the regatta and to lay plans for raising the expense fund. An appeal to the general public of Washington to contribute to this fund will be made, it was hinted by an association official.

Among those active in the current movement are Commodore Conrad C. Smith, W. A. Rogers, Gordon L. Leech, E. C. Baltz, Edson Briggs and Dr. R. Lyman Sexton, all motor boat owners and racing enthusiasts, and Gen. Anton Stephan, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, and Isaac Gans, former president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Both of the previous President Cup's regattas were successful. Competition was of a high order and huge crowds gathered to watch the races.

Cup, Donated by Coolidge, Held by Mrs. Dodge.

The President's Cup, donated by the former Chief Executive, Calvin Coolidge, is now held by Mrs. Delphine Dodge Baker, of this city, whose boat captured the feature race in 1927. Gordon Hammersley, of New York City, won the cup in 1926.

The Secretary of the Navy Cup, emblematic of victory in the secondary feature of the regatta, was won both years by Mrs. W. J. Connors, of New York City. The President's Cup is a perpetual trophy and each annual winner is entitled to possession of it for one year. The Secretary of the Navy Cup is to be retained permanently by the person winning it three times.

In all probability, if the regatta is held, entries will be received from many of the contestants in the Gold Cup regatta, chief national motor boat racing event, which is scheduled for August 24-25 at Red Bank, N. J. The types of craft which will be seen include the gold cup, displacement, "151," outboard and runabout.

Navy Golfers Beaten At Sherwood Forest

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., July 18.—The last four-ball match to come in decided the team battle between the Naval Academy Golf Club and the Navy Department of Washington at Sherwood Forest today. The Naval Academy won, 10½ to 7½, Nassau scoring. Six four-ball matches constituted the test.

With five of the six four-ball matches in, the teams were deadlocked at 7½ to 7½. The only setto unreported at that time was the No. 1 four-ball match.

Finally, Lieut. Commander W. F. Popham and his partner, Commander Pollard, reached the eighteenth green and announced a clean sweep of all three points for the Naval Academy. Their Navy Department rivals were Commander Douglas and Lieut. Sherwood.

Commander Pollard played the best golf of the day, shooting a 76 on the difficult layout. Admiral Standley, who played for the Navy Department in the No. 5 match, shot an 89.

Walker-Devos Match Prospect for Chicago

Chicago, July 18 (A.P.).—A championship bout between Mickey Walker, world middleweight champion, and Bene Devos, Belgian aspirant, is the next title battle in prospect for Chicago.

The Illinois Athletic Commission today had in its possession a check for $5,000 from Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., of New York, as a forfeit and challenge on behalf of Devos. Paddy Harmon, president of the Chicago Stadium Corporation, is negotiating for the bout for his arena this fall.

Devos was given preference over Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska Wildcat, as an opponent for Walker, because of the difficulties in which Hudkins is involved with the New York and California Athletic Commissions. Hudkins lost a close decision to Walker here last summer.

Under a ruling by the National Boxing Association, Walker must defend his title on or before September 30 to save a $10,000 forfeit.

NEW STADIA RISING IN SOUTH

Oglethorpe, Duke and Georgia Prepare for Football.

By EDDIE BRETZ
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

ATLANTA, Ga., July 18 (A.P.).—While the hapless baseball barons split seasons and otherwise spur lagging attendance, the football impresarios go merrily on with plans for a season which, in the parlance of the big top, will be "bigger and better" than ever before.

Fine new stadia are springing up all over the South.

The University of Georgia, at Athens, has just completed a plant with a seating capacity of 35,000 and the Yale Bulldogs are coming all the way from New Haven to help dedicate this huge bowl October 12.

Duke University, at Durham, N. C., is rushing work on a $400,000 stadium which will be formally opened October 5 with the Panthers of the University of Pittsburgh participating in the housewarming festivities.

Oglethorpe Starts Work On Stadium.

Not to be outdone by its sister institution, Oglethorpe University, here in Atlanta, has started work on the first unit of a $650,000 stadium which, when completed, will take care of 40,000 without crowding.

Football is the daddy of all college sports. In most schools it pays the freight for other forms of athletics. Annual deficits in baseball, track and basket ball are smilingly wiped out by the overflow in the football coffers.

College athletic officials realize this and from the way they are sinking part of their profits in bigger and better bowls they intend to see that old King Football has plenty of elbow room to work in.

Everybody Knew Who Made T. D. But Bucky's Girl

By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher New York Giants).

Ossie Salem, Drake University football coach, tells me a good story about the much-discussed Notre Dame-Southern California game of 1927 in Chicago with Buck Dahman, the Notre Dame half back, who scored the only touchdown of the game as the hero.

"It seems that 'Bucky' had given his fiance a ticket to the game," tells Salem, "and which he told me was valued at $50 on the board. "Bucky" played a sterling game all day, and it was he who grabbed a pass in a nifty way and ran for Notre Dame's winning touchdown.

"Approaching his little lady after the game, all expectant for congratulations, he was dumbfounded when she said to him, "It was a very nice game, Bucky, but who scored the touchdown for Notre Dame?"

High Schools Seeking Vaughan as Grid Coach

Special to The Washington Post.

State College, N. C., July 18.—Two high schools have requested the State College department of physical education, J. F. Miller, director, for information as to coaching ability of Fred P. Vaughan, State's all-Southern guard of 1928. Vaughan is now in R. O. T. C. camp at Anderson, Ala. Both Clayton and Bleak Mountain school authorities are interested in the hefty linesman.

Director Miller states that he has at least six calls for combination coaches-teachers from high schools, but that his department will not have enough qualified graduates to fill the needs this year.

LINCOLN POST WINS MOUND DUEL, 2-1

Peregoy, of Victory, Is Beaten by Lynch in Legion Series.

THE Lincoln and Victory Post Nines staged a regular big league game yesterday in the opening game of the second half play in the American Legion series. The Lincoln Post Nine won, 2 to 1, in one of the most interesting encounters of the Legion series this season.

Lynch and Peregoy opposed in a torrid pitching duel and each hurler allowed only three hits. Lynch, for Lincoln Post, fanned eleven batsmen to have the better of the duel with his opponent.

Both teams scored in the first inning, with zeros being chalked up until the eighth, when the Lincolns broke the ice and scored off Peregoy for the decision.

The Victorys made a gallant bid for the game in the ninth, however, when they put two men on base with none out. Lynch pitched his strongest here for Lincoln Post by fanning one batter and forcing the next two to roll easily to the infield.

Samoa Cricket Feud Causes Starvation

Auckland, New Zealand, July 18 (A.P.).—A remarkable cricket match in Samoa which lasted three months and in which each team had 400 players was described by R. W. Tate, a former administrator of Samoa, to members of the Victoria League at New Plymouth, New Zealand.

One village, Tate said, had challenged another for a stake of 100 kegs of beer. At the end of three months the villages were in a state of starvation because the men neglected their families, a free fight resulted and several lives were lost. Consequently legislation was brought down prohibiting the natives from playing for any stake.

In the neighboring Friendly Islands group, the natives have been playing cricket for many years, and are very proficient at it. The prince consort—Tonga being a native kingdom ruled by the beautiful young Queen Salote—is himself an ardent cricketer. There is a tip-top team in connection with Tubou College, where the sons of the island chiefs receive their training. It plays an eleven of every British man-of-war that visits the place, and has not been defeated for years.

As in the cast of Samoa, the Tongan government also has had to legislate on the subject of cricket, limiting the number of days upon which the game may be played to two a week. Before the law was passed, numbers of young Tongans sacrificed nearly all their time to the pastime, and their families suffered in consequence.

SUBURBAN TEAMS TO PLAY.

The Takoma Tigers and Silver Spring Giants play the third of their three-game series Sunday on the suburban championship when they clash on the new Silver Spring diamond at 3 o'clock.

Each team has won a game in the series. Duffy and McCarthy will oppose on the mound. The Tigers have an open date for July 28. Naval Hospital and Bond Breadmen are challenged. Phone Georgia 3466 or National 4205, branch 36.

HAYES TAKES PLAYGROUND HONORS

Peabody Loses Meet; Cook Beats Bruce; Girls Compete.

HAYES Playground kept its record run of victories in dual field and track meets clear yesterday when it defeated the Peabody team, 108 1-3 to 66 2-3 in one of the best attended meets of the series now being conducted. Eighty-eight boys took part in the event and about 250 spectators viewed the proceedings. The Buchanan girls held a meet with girls from that playground only competing.

Cook Playground defeated Bruce, 50 to 35, in the first of the dual meets on colored grounds. These meets are practice affairs arranged to prepare the youngsters for the city finals to be held next month, but a great rivalry has been aroused between the various teams and keen interest is manifested in each event.

Boys Restricted to One Event.

Owing to the fact that boys have been permitted to enter more than one event in the dual and triangular meets some have gained the impression that this can be done in the finals, but playground officials, wishing to set the youngsters right on this question, stated last night that in the championship games a boy may enter but one event.

Today, Emery will compete with Wheatley on the latter playground, Congress Heights will be host to Ketcham and Tenth and Evart will entertain John Burroughs in dual meets. Next Tuesday, the conference meets will start when teams in the Eastern section will vie for conference honors.

Secrecy Surrounds Line-Ups For Leech Cup Net Battle

Army and Navy Tennis Stars Clash Tomorrow at Chevy Chase; Another Watt-Van Vliet Duel Is Prospect.

UNUSUAL secrecy prevails in the rival camps of the Army and Navy tennis teams as the time nears for their annual clash in the Leech Cup matches, to be played on the courts of the Chevy Chase Club tomorrow afternoon. Neither of the team captains, Lieut. Comdr. Vincent H. Godfrey, of the Navy, and Maj. Robert C. Van Vliet, of the Army, will definitely announce their line-ups for the interservice championship matches.

Not until noon today will the players be named for the four singles posts and the pairings announced for the three doubles contests. Neither of the rival team captains is willing to venture any information that his opponents might capitalize.

Maj. Van Vliet, who has his cohorts drilling each morning on the Columbia Country Club courts, announced last night that he, Maj. L. D. Finley, Lieut. David D. Hedekin and Lieut. S. K. Robertson will carry the Army's hopes in singles competition. It is probable that this quartet will be rated in the order named.

Prospects of Another Watt-Van Vliet.

The Navy's singles representatives will be selected from Commander C. C. Gill, Lieut. Richard Morgan Watt, jr., Ensigns W. E. Howard, J. M. McCue and James Farrin, Lieut. Comdr. Godfrey ventured. There is little doubt that the No. 1 assignment will be given Lieut. Watt.

Prospects of another duel between Maj. Van Vliet and Lieut. Watt are bright. The Army champion took the No. 1 match from his more youthful opponent last year, but only after one of the most gruelling tests of the matches, which Navy won, 4 to 3. The Navy star, who is an ex-wrestling champion of the Naval Academy, carried the match into three sets, winning the second, 6—3, after dropping the first, 6 to 4. Maj. Van Vliet took the deciding set, 7 to 5, after a hard battle.

Van Vliet-Finley Team Plays Gill-Anderson.

Army's doubles teams will take the courts as follows: Maj. Van Vliet and Maj. Finley—Lieut. Robinson and Maj. William M. Robertson, and Col. Wait C. Johnson and Lieut. Hedekin. The Navy doubles contenders will be paired as follows: Capt. W. S. Anderson and Commander Gill, Lieut. Com. Godfrey and Lieut. Watt, and Ensigns Howard and Farrin.

It is probable that the Van Vliet-Finley Team will oppose the Anderson-Gill combine in the No. 1 doubles event. The latter pair were out of combat last year, but the year previous they out-generaled Col. Johnson and Lieut. Hedekin in the No. 1 event in two sets. Commander Gill and Capt. Anderson are the real veterans of the Navy squad. Their return to competition has strengthened Navy's prospects of successfully defending the Leech Cup.

The berths assigned for the singles and doubles will not be known until tomorrow, when the rival captains will submit their prospective line-ups to Robert E. Newby, chairman of the Middle Atlantic committee, under whose supervision the matches are conducted. Referees and other officials will be named at that time, Newby announced last night.

Play will start at 2:15 o'clock Saturday. The four singles matches will start simultaneously at that time. The doubles matches will be played immediately after the singles contests are completed.

Rival Teams Appear Well Matched.

As the rival teams appear well-matched, as indicated by the performances of the individual players in the Army and District of Columbia championship tournaments held here recently and by the manner in which the Navy team defeated the Mount Washington netmen of Baltimore and an all-star Edgemoor Club team in matches the past two weeks, a record gallery is expected. The Army team will be seeking an even rating for the series inaugurated in 1924, while the Navy stalwarts will be battling to run their string of victories to four straight. The Army was returned the victor in the first two meetings. The past three years have brought triumphs to the Navy standards.

The rival captains believe that a bit of strategy in placing their players may swing victory to their respective teams. That is why the two leaders are loath to announce the positions of their players before tomorrow at noon. The two captains will submit their line-ups at the same time.

Alex Smith Advises Golfers to Keep Cool

Any number of ailments and afflictions are likely to descend upon the heads of golfers treading the fairways these dog weather days, and with the thought that an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure, Alex Smith, professional of Westchester-Biltmore Country Club, has posted the following warning in the clubhouse locker room:

"You can't keep a cool brain under a hot head—the wise golfer wears a cool hat on the links to prevent:

"Sun stroke, heat prostration, sizzled scalp, high blood pressure, low vitality, eye strain and straw-like hair."

English College Netmen Defeat Americans, 5-1

Newport, R. I., July 18 (A.P.).—The invading Oxford-Cambridge tennis teams, here for the seventh biennial Prentice Cup matches with the combined Harvard-Yale Team, swamped the American collegians five matches to one here today in the opening day at the Casino turf courts. The only American victory came when Arthur Ingraham, jr., Harvard player, disposed of E. O. Mather, American-born Oxford student, 7—5, 2—6, 6—3, in a singles match filled with thrills.

In the other singles matches, N. G. Farquharson, of Cambridge, defeated R. W. Ryan, of Yale, 9—7, 6—0, and Guy Cooper, of Oxford, vanquished G. A. Holloway, also of Yale, 6—2, 7—5. Farquharson and Cooper teamed in the doubles and set back Ingraham and B. H. Whitbeck, another Harvard player. England made a clean sweep of the other doubles when Mather and De Riccu defeated Wright and Holloway, 6—2, 6—1, and Avery and Young, a Cambridge team, nosed out Wood and Ryan, 7—5, 5—7, 8—6, after a prolonged and vigorous struggle.

FRENCH LOOP FEATURE TO SENATORS

Corinthians, Webcos and Ruels Other Winners.

TWO extremes were reached yesterday in the four games played in the French Insect League. Two games were close and two were one-sided. Another game was not played, the Sam Wests forfeiting to the Eastern Athletic Club.

The two close games resulted in the Senators defeating the Wonders, 1 to 0, and the Corinthians nosing out the Hess, 6 to 5, while the two one-sided encounters included the Webcos win over the Nehis, 25 to 2, and the Ruels victory over the Shapiros, 17 to 4.

Talburtt and Cuozzo engaged in the pitchers' battle in the Senator-Wonder 1-to-0 game. Both hurlers allowed five hits and worked strongly. The Senators' one run in the first inning won the game.

Corinthians Win Out In Ninth Inning.

A two-run rally in the ninth won for the Corinthians over the Hess in the 6-to-5 game. The Corinthians had the decision tucked away once during the proceedings by runs in the early innings. Rallies by the Hess in the fourth and eighth innings made the Corinthians work for their win in the ninth.

Heavy hitting by the winning teams featured the one-sided games, although the pitchers of the two winning teams tw

THE DOUBLE - - By EDGAR WALLACE

Dick Staines, department inspector, happens upon mysterious intruders in the deserted house of jovial Walter Derrick, neighbor of Tommy Weald, whom Dick is visiting. One of them, a woman, amazes him by her striking resemblance to Mary Dane, a beautiful nurse, whom he has lately met at Brighton, where she is caring for a Mr. Cornfort. When Lordy Brown, escaped convict from Africa, attacks Mary insisting that she is Mary Devilliers, of Capetown, Dick concludes that the girl has a double who is involved in a criminal gang that is attempting to get something for nothing—and that something the portion of Derrick's inheritance which has never been found. While week-ending with Derrick, Tommy and Dick slip away to Bognor in the hope of seeing Mary Dane, and are not successful.

"Is he next door?"

"No, sir. I believe, but I am not sure, that Mr. Derrick has given him the sack," said the butler.

"Rather unfair," said Dick. "Send him up to me when he arrives."

He had hardly spoken the words when he heard the front door bell ring, and a few minutes later the butler ushered in the crestfallen caretaker.

There was in the butler's attitude a vast and brotherly sympathy. Mr Minns was a well-built man, inclined to be plump. He gave Dick the impression that he was very much interested in everybody's affairs except his own.

"This is very terrible news, sir," Larkin said. "I saw something on the newspaper bills about a man being murdered in the West End, but I never dreamt it was in our house."

Minns, it seemed, was wrong when he said that the man had been dismissed. He had been told to call at Lord Weald's house for a message, and the message apparently was more in the nature of a warning than an actual dismissal.

"The only thing I haven't got to do, sir, is to sleep there at nights," he said with satisfaction. "I've to stay on duty till six at night. After that I lock up and I'm finished. Mr. Derrick is going abroad. You told him about the ghost, didn't you, sir?" He shook his head. "I wish you hadn't. I think the beer I drunk that night must have made me see wrong."

Dick had not been idle since he arrived at the house. He had a carpenter who had sawn off two lengths of thick planking and had fitted them so that they afforded a bridge between the two balconies. These were securely fixed by nightfall, and as he explained to Bourke, who came to dinner with him, he was not taking unnecessary risks. He confessed that he had never swung from boicony to balcony without feeling a sense of physical nausea.

"If you live here long enough they'll let you put a gate there," said Bourke, and held his glass to the light. "Your lordly friend stocks a good port."

"And the tragic thing is that he doesn't know it from gooseberry wine," sighed Dick, and the sigh was not so much for Lord Weald's execrable taste in alcohol as to his juxtaposition to nurse Mary Dane at that moment.

CHAPTER XII.

After Bourke had gone Dick spent some little time adjusting the portable bell. The wires had been repaired, and now he stripped the bell push and replaced it with two thin plates of copper shaped like a thin V. He waited till it was dark, and then he climbed into the next house and, lifting the carpet, placed his improvised detector near the door. There was a slight bulge in the carpet, but this would not be noticed in the dark. Satisfied with his work, he returned to his room. The night was cold, with occasional showers, but he made provision against rain. There was above each window a large sun blind, he discovered, and one of these he had lowered as soon as it was dark. The edge of it came down to within a few inches of the balcony parapet, and turning off the lights in his room he wrapped himself in an overcoat and settled down to his vigil.

It was not a difficult house to watch. Behind was a high-walled courtyard containing a garage which had been built by Walter, but between the garage and the house there was no communication. From where he sat he commanded, too, an uninterrupted view of one side of the square. No car could pull up at or near the house without his seeing its passengers alight. By leaning over the edge of the balcony, he could see Derrick's front door and the deep area beyond. The back of the house he left to mind, seeing no advantage in posting a man there.

At half-past 10 Minns came up, ing into his bedroom with hot and sandwiches, and Dick thought he might for a moment forego his watch. He returned to the room and drawn the curtains, put on the light.

"You don't know how glad the servants are, sir, that you're here," said the butler gratefully. "If this was a basement house you'd never get any of the girls to stay."

"Isn't it a basement house?" said Dick, in surprise.

"No, sir. The ground floor is the bottom floor."

"Has it no cellars?"

The man shook his head.

"No, Mr. Staines; the wine is kept in an outhouse leading off the kitchen. I rather wonder old Derrick didn't put a cellar here. It used to be his house you know."

"I didn't know," said Dick, interested.

"Oh, yes; his lordship's father bought it from him. Both these houses were under repair together, and——"

The bell at Dick's foot rang shrilly.

He dropped the cup and saucer onto the table, leaped through the curtain, and in two strides was over and into the next house. He pushed open the window, and as he did so he saw a shadowy figure confronting him. Before he could flash his hand lamp, the door slammed violently and he heard a key turned. He threw his weight against the door, but it was held by the jamb.

Running out onto the balcony again, he flew through his own room down the stairs. When he reached the street the door was closed. The man had left Dick the key; he thrust it into the keyhole and turned, but the door did not budge. * * *

Bolted on the inside!

Larkin could not have done that when he let himself out. Obviously the intruders had taken the precaution.

He whistled to a policeman whom he saw on the corner, and the man sauntered over in his leisurely way: a little ruffled, for policemen resent being whistled at.

"Stand here. If anybody tries to get away, take your stick to 'em."

The officer recognized him and saluted.

"I'll tell you in a minute."

He ran down the stairs to the area. That door was closed, too. He tried the window, failed to move the sash, and, drawing his rubber truncheon from his pocket, he smashed a pane of glass, dropped the sash, and climbed inside to a room which was normally used as a servants' hall.

The door was open, but the light that had burned in the passage when he was there before had been extinguished. He groped along the wall to find the switch, felt it at last and turned it down, but no light came. Again he had recourse to his electric lamp.

Before going any farther, however, he unlocked the kitchen door and called down the policeman.

"Stand inside the doorway and close the door behind you, or they'll see you," he whispered.

"How many are there?" the policeman asked in the same tone.

"Does it matter?" asked Dick irritably. The policeman admitted that it didn't.

Dick was wearing crepe-soled shoes; he had worn them that night with a purpose, and now, extinguishing his hand lamp, he crept forward, feeling along the wall with his hand. He found the foot of the stairs that led to the hall and crept up stealthily. There was no sound of any kind. He continued his way up the dark staircase; the stairs were well made; not so much as a creak betrayed his movements.

The first landing drew blank. Softly he turned the handle of the drawing room and sidled in. There was light enough coming through the windows to show him that the room was empty. They must have heard the smashing of the glass, whoever "they" were.

He crept up the second flight, stopping now and again to listen, and reached the landing outside the locked door. He felt for the key; it was not there. But somebody was in the room. He heard a sibilant whisper and struck heavily against the panel with his truncheon. At that startling noise he heard a quick "Oh!" and again the fierce whisper.

A woman was there—no hardened burglar would say "Oh!"

Dick stepped back to the edge of the landing and, taking one jump, hurled his shoulder against the door. With a deafening crack it burst open and he was in the room—it was empty!

He knew the position of the light switch and turned it, but without result. And then, for no reason that he could assign, a cold shiver ran down his spine and his hair lifted. He had a feeling that he was being watched, that mocking eyes were staring at him from some invisible and unknown point of observation. So real was the illusion that he turned round, and for the first time in many years did that which no English police officer does except in moments of extraordinary peril. He took an automatic pistol from his pocket and pulled back the jacket.

He heard a voice downstairs and jumped. It was the policeman.

"Do you want any help, sir?"

Dick hesitated a moment.

"Come up," he said. "Have your stick ready—there's somebody in the house."

"Somebody in the house!" came the low, mocking echo of his words, as though somebody had repeated them in a fit of amusement.

He spun round; there was no sign of anything human. Nothing moved. The sweat was standing on his forehead. And then he began to laugh softly to himself, and put back his pistol. He had passed the saturation point of terror, and his sense of humor was asserting itself.

The constable came, lent his broad-beamed light to Dick's, and they searched the wall for some secret hiding place. There was none that could be detected. Dick opened the cupboard where he had found the vacuum pump, but that was too shallow for a hiding place, and he pushed the door to shut it.

Something in the slow swing of the door aroused his curiosity. It was very heavy. He tapped it with his truncheon and it rang; the cupboard was of steel, its edge fitted into the jamb of the cupboard as truly as a safe door might. At the back of the cupboard were four wooden pegs screwed into the plaster wall; the wall was apparently solid enough.

This beats me, as Mr. Derrick would say.

He went to examine his little bell detector. Somebody else had found it; it had been kicked out from beneath the carpet, the wire was cut.

"Do you smell anything, sir?" asked the policeman suddenly.

Tony sniffed. Not cordite this time, but a subtle fragrance which he had probably noticed before but had not registered in his mind.

"Like ladies' scent, sir," said the policeman. "Do you know what it is, sir?"

"I'm not very well acquainted with perfumes, constable. It smells like any other to me."

He could not see, but he guessed that the policeman was smiling in the darkness.

"It's what they call Sans Atout," he said, proud of his knowledge.

"How the devil did you know that?" asked the staggered Dick.

CARRIER BONDS LEAD IRREGULAR DEALINGS

Market Turns Downward After Strong Opening; Federal List Suffers.

FOREIGN GROUP IS DULL

New York, July 18 (A.P.).—Rails accounted for the bulk of the trading in today's irregularly lower bond market, with several of the leaders in this group breaking through to new tops or equaling their previous highs before the selling cropped out.

The market opened strong, but turned downward before midday as traders sold the stock privilege issues in anticipation of the $58,000,000 increase in brokers' loans to a record total, announced after the close of the markets. Money was easier, call loan rate renewing at 8 and dropping to 7 per cent. Time money held at 7¾ and 8 per cent for all maturities.

Railroad financing dominated the bond market. The Erie Railroad accepted, subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, a bid of 94.847 for an issue of $8,370,000 4½ per cent equipment trust certificates, maturing from 1 to 15 years. The Nickel Plate, another Van Sweringen road, offered $2,400,000 in 4½ per cent equipment trust gold certificates, priced to yield 5.50 to 5.05 per cent. A price of 98.5 was set for the Brooklyn Manhattan Transit Corporation's 3-year 6½ per cent secured notes, amounting to $13,500,000.

The 5s of 1949 of Alleghany Corporation, holding company for Van Sweringen rail stocks, again broke through to a new top at 110, but dipped to 107¾ in the afternoon, and closed at 109 for a fractional loss. New Haven convertible 6s reached a new peak at 132 and finished at 131½ for a fractional gain. Southern Pacific 4½s held at their record price, established yesterday.

Public Service of New Jersey 4½s followed the stock into record high ground, advancing 10 points, to 260. The 5s A of Northern States Power, stock of which has been selling at record highs on the curb exchange, sold off 1¾.

The communication issues again were called upon to absorb profit taking American Telephone 4½s dropped 1¾ and International Telephone 4½s a fraction.

The foreign list was dull and featureless.

Reports on Payments.

G. Bryan Pitts, chairman of the board of the F H. Smith Co., nationally known Washington investment house, announced yesterday that for the year ending May 31, 1929, there was paid by or through the company, $5,744,786.42 to the holders of securities sold by this house.

This vast sum paid by or through the company represented, according to Mr. Pitts, cash or securities in lieu of cash, paid on account of bonds redeemed prior to maturity, premiums on redeemed bonds, principal on maturing bonds, interest on bonds, and dividends on the preferred stock of the F. H. Smith Co.

Referring to the operations of the company, which is now ranked among the foremost investment institutions in the country, Mr. Pitts said:

"Millions of dollars of real estate mortgage securities which are regarded by financial authorities as a preeminent form of sound investment have been offered to investors by the F H. Smith Company, secured by a number of properties it has financed in Washington and other large cities. Many of these issues have been called for payment prior to maturity at a premium to the bondholders, while other issues have been paid in full at maturity. Specified amounts or bonds of the various issues have become due from time to time and have been paid off, and the semiannual interest on all issues offered to the public by the F. H. Smith Company has been paid regularly when due.

"Besides a host of individual investors who are to be found in every State in the Union as well as in all other parts of the world many banks, insurance companies and trustees have purchased its offerings."

PISCATAWAY ROAD CHANGE DISCUSSED

Prince Georges Committee Confers Today With Highway Board.

SCHOOL PUPILS INCREASE

Change in the proposed route of the Piscataway road from Piscataway to the Charles County line, about three miles of gravel road, will be discussed today at Baltimore by County Commissioner Harry M. Bowen, of Prince Georges County and the State Roads Commission. Residents of the territory served by the road have asked that the route be changed.

A delegation of residents appeared before the board of county commissioners Tuesday to ask for the change and Dr. Bowen was appointed a committee to discuss the matter with the roads commission. Dr. Bowen will be accompanied by J. Hampton Magruder, counsel to the county commissioners, and James C. Blackwell, clerk to the county commissioners.

While the committee is in Baltimore, an attempt will be made to secure a price which would be acceptable to the county for the $425,000 in road bonds authorized by the last legislature to finance a large road building program in the county. The bids received after advertising were not considered satisfactory and it is hoped that a price can be obtained at private sale which will more nearly reach the par value of the bonds.

Other details of road building and administration are expected to be discussed at the conference.

The annual report of Miss Kathleen Shears, attendance officer of Prince Georges County, showing the largest increase in school attendance in the history of the county, has been approved by the county board of education and forwarded to the State department of education.

According to the report there are an increase of 662 pupils in the year just completed over the previous year. There were 12,137 pupils enrolled in the schools of the county in the past year. The largest previous increase shown in the county schools was 353, which was in 1918.

The report shows the heaviest increase was in the enrollment for white elementary schools where an increase of 313 pupils is shown. An increase of 164 is shown in white high school enrollment, while colored elementary schools show an increase of 71 and colored high schools 114.

One of the best indications of the size and growth of the school system, according to Superintendent of Schools Nicholas Orem, is the tabulation of the total number of days attended by the pupils, approximately 2,000,604 days. This is nearly twice the number of days attended in 1921, when the attendance was 1,056,000 days. The tabulation indicates that the county school system has practically doubled in the course of eight years, Mr. Orem pointed out.

Another interesting item in the report is that on transportation of pupils to the county schools. As there is a widespread agitation in the county, more pronounced in the rural sections, for free transportation of high school pupils, the figures in this item are of timely interest. The report shows that 841 pupils were transported in the past year, compared to 698 in 1928. Of this number, 183 were high school students, the remaining 658 being grade school children.

There were 671 children graduated from the white graded schools, 194 from the white high schools, 202 from the colored elementary and 8 from the colored high school.

Social Scientists Honor Virginian

Dr. Wilson Gee Is Invited to Attend Meeting in Hanover, N. H.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 18.—Dr. Wilson Gee, director of the institute for research in the social sciences at the University of Virginia, has been invited to attend the annual Dartmouth Conference, in Hanover, N. H., August 26-31, with a limited group of leading social scientists for the purpose of studying social science problems of the nation.

This conference, which is held under the auspices of the Social Science Research Council, represents the most distinguished gathering of social science authorities in America. It will place special emphasis this session on the needs and possibilities of research in regional problems.

The body came into existence a few years ago when the Social Science Research Council, one of the most influential bodies in the Nation, relating to the fields of history, economics, sociology, government and allied subjects, began to call into conference a number of the social scientists in order that they might sit down for consecutive thinking and planning, not possible during the college session where the pressure of teaching and administrative duties interfere. It is at this meeting that the policies of the council are determined—matters of vital concern in the progress of the social interest throughout the nation.

TRUE BILL CHARGE ASSAULT BY POLICE

RUM DRINKING ALLEGED

Charlotte, July 18 (A.P.).—True bills of indictment charging Arthur J. Roach and Tom Gilbert, Gastonia policemen, with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill were returned today by the Mecklenburg County jury upon evidence the officers forced Pedro Melton, a filling station operator, to jump into the Catawba River after he told them he hd no whisky for sale.

The alleged assault occurred the afternoon of June 27, a few hours before Roach and Gilbert were wounded at the tent encampment of Loray Mill strikers in Gastonia. O. F. Aderholt, Gastonia chief of police, was wounded fatally the same night when he, with the officers, went to the camp to investigate reports of rioting there. The officers said they were fired upon from ambush.

Twenty-three strikers and strike sympathizers have been indicted on charges of murder and felonious assault for the shooting of Aderholt. Evidence upon which the indictments were returned was furnished the solicitor by Tim Jimison, counsel for the strikers. Sworn affidavits from Melton and others at the filling station alleged the officers were intoxicated and drew revolvers on Melton, later pelting him with stones after he had been forced to jump into the river.

Election Interest In Fauquier Grows

Stubborn Contest Is Waged Between Candidates for Assembly.

Warrenton, July 18.—With the Democratic primary less than three weeks off, interest is growing daily, aside from the gubernatorial candidates, in the contest for the House of Delegates being waged between John T. Ramey, incumbent, and Maj. R. A. McIntyre. Both camps are claiming victory. Little or no speaking is being done but both candidates and their supporters are leaving no stone unturned that may bring them victory.

Present indications are that Pollard is leading Mapp in Fauquier County, but the race will be a close one here. Mapp, who showed a great deal of strength in the county, and in Warrenton particularly, four years ago, has lost some of this. It is expected that ground 2,500 votes will be cast in the county. Fauquier County has five magisterial districts and 22 precincts. Warrenton being the largest, with a vote of about 600.

New Fire Truck and Repair of Streets Are Among Improvements.

LETTER CARRIERS MEET

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.,
Phone Alexandria 523.

The city council yesterday adopted a number of resolutions which have been pending for some time, involving a large expenditure of funds, the most of which were items included in the annual budget.

The first resolution appropriated $15,500 for the purchase of an aerial truck for the fire department. This will be located in the present engine house of No. 1 company, on Prince street.

Appropriation of $7,600 for the construction of curb and gutter and bituminous roadway on Queen street from Union to Washington street was made, the work to be done after promissory notes amounting to $6,100 shall have been signed by the property owners as their proportion of the cost. A similar appropriation for the paving of Patrick street, from Queen to Princess street, with the property owners paying $1,580; one for Alfred street from Princess to Oronoco street of $2,000, with $1,360 to be paid by the property owners, and one providing for the paving of King street from Royal to Patrick street, at a cost of $15,000, including the replacing of the present vitrified brick roadway to within two feet, eight inches of the curb, were all adopted.

An appropriation for the purchase and installation of eight fire plugs on King street was also adopted.

An ordinance was adopted directing the Mount Vernon, Alexandria and Washington Railway Company to take up its tracks on King street from Royal to Patrick and from Henry to Fayette street and to lay new ties and rails of approved pattern, place concrete under the ends of the ties and between the ties to the top of same, within 60 days after notification from the city manager, the work to be done under the supervision of the city engineer.

Ordinances were passed appropriating $2,500 to reconstruct a portion of the old tanyard sewer which was destroyed in a recent storm, and to make such other repairs as are absolutely necessary; to construct a bridge over Hooff's Run in Prince street extended, $1,000, and $1,200 for the construction of a culvert under Janney's Lane at Taylor's Run.

An ordinance to appropriate $1,500 for a bulkhead at the Potomac River across King street, and to fill in behind the bulkhead, was held over under the rules, as were resolutions appropriating $3,800 for a sewer on Russell road from Chapman street to Maple street; $1,800 for a sewer on Masonic View avenue, from Russel road to Junior street, and a sewer from Hooff's Run to Junior street via Chapman street, Russell Road and Summers' Drive, $13,000.

The financial report of the city for the month of June showed a balance on hand June 1 of $14,940.17, budget receipts of $108,953.19, other receipts of $379, budget disbursements of $75,020.36, other disbursements of $20,127.42, and a cash balance on hand July 1 of $29,124.58.

A resolution was adopted appropriating $25 for a membership in the Virginia Police Executives Association.

An application of the General Outdoor Advertising Co. for permission to remove four poster display signs from the side of a building on Alfred street between Wolfe and Wiles streets, and re-erect same on the property adjoining 701 Patrick street, was rejected.

A permit which had been granted for the erection of a sign on the 700 block Patrick street has been revoked.

Fall From Window Kills Woman, 86

Mrs. Mary Serena Benson Lived With Daughter at Petersburg.

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., July 18.—Mrs. Mary Serena Benson, 86, died last night as the result of injuries received Sunday night when she accidentally fell from a second-story window at her home. Mrs. Benson had been semiconscious since the accident, which occurred Sunday about midnight. Coroner McGill viewed the body, but held the fall accidental and deemed an inquest unnecessary.

Mrs. Benson's body was shipped today to Flint, Mich., for burial. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Mary E. Goodyear, of this city, with whom she made her home; Mrs. T. P. Hughes, of Tampa, Fla., and Mrs. E. B. Coste, of Mount Morris, Mich.; four sons, E. H. Benson, of Tampa, Fla.; W. A. Benson, of Milford, Mich.; Dr. John C. Benson, of Flint, Mich., and Dr. R. L. Benson, of Portland, Oreg., and one brother, J. E. Bresette, of Topeka, Kans. Mrs. Benson was the widow of John R. Benson and was a native of South Bend, Ind. For the past two years Mrs. Benson had resided in Petersburg. Sunday night she left her bed while the rest of the household slept and for some purpose went near a front window of the house. There she lost her balance and fell about 15 feet to the yard.

Mrs. Benson was not missed for some time, but when her bed was discovered empty a search disclosed her lying unconscious below the window from which she had fallen. A physician was summoned, but she never fully regained consciousness.

LARGE WHEAT CROP SEEN IN MARYLAND

DISEASES ARE CHECKED

Above average sunshine during the early part of June, generally favorable weather for harvesting, and evidences of an increased harvested acreage indicate that the 1929 Maryland wheat crop will be the largest since 1926, according to S. R. Newell, Federal agricultural statistician for Maryland. These indications point to the production of 9,474,000 bushels of wheat this year as compared to a 1928 crop of 8,745,000 bushels and 11,960,000 bushels in 1926.

The area of wheat harvested this year is now estimated at 541,000 acres as compared with the estimate of 546,000 acres planted in the fall of 1928, 530,000 acres harvested in 1928 and an average of 528,000 acres during the preceding five years.

For the State as a whole this year's wheat crop is characterized by an abundance of straw and the absence of serious damage from septoria nodorum, the ravages of this fungous disease being checked by the prevalence of bright sunshiny weather during the first half of June.

Average Yield in Most Areas.

However, while prospects for a good yield are much better than average on the Eastern Shore, indications do not point to more than average yields in other sections of the State. Washington County reports short heads, stands in northern Frederick County were poor, and the outlook for Montgomery County and southern Maryland is for only fair to average yields.

The condition of corn in Maryland was reported at 84 per cent of normal on July 1, as compared with 80 per cent on July 1, 1928. Although a little late in starting, the crop has made good progress thus far. However, it is still too early to make an accurate forecast of Maryland corn production in 1929, since July weather conditions have a marked influence on the final outturn of the crop. The estimate of the area in corn this year, 509,000 acres, is 4 per cent below the acreage harvested in 1928.

Potato Estimate Lower.

The preliminary estimate of the area of potatoes for harvest in 1929 is 40,000 acres, as compared with 47,000 acres in 1928. Acreage of early potatoes on the Eastern shore has been reduced approximately 20 per cent this year but the reduction in acreage from 1928 has not been nearly as marked in other sections of the State. The reported condition of potatoes at 81 per cent of normal on July 1, points to a production of 3,953,000 bushels this year.

A slight increase in production prospects of peaches has occurred since June 1. The July 1 estimate of 583,000 bushels now compares with 465,000 bushels in 1928 and an average production of 505,000 bushels during the preceding five years.

The reported condition of apples on July 1 points to a total production of 2,266,000 bushels this year as compared with 2,190,000 bushels harvested in 1928.

Dry Raiders Seize Still, But Operators Escape

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., July 18.—A raiding party headed by Deputy Sheriff A. J. Wigginton, and in which were three West Virginia prohibition officers and a Federal agent, returned last night from the mountainous section west of here with a 75-gallon still found near Dehaven postoffice. It was thought men in charge of the outfit fled to a more remote section of the mountains as the officers approached, as the still was in full operation. In addition to the copper still, four barrels of mash were found and destroyed and about a gallon of liquor was found near the still. West Virginia agents joined the party because it was uncertain whether the still would be found in that State or on the Virginia side of the line.

COURTHOUSE PLANS UP IN MONTGOMERY

NEW HIGHWAY IS OPENED

The first meeting of the augmented courthouse building committee of Montgomery County will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the courthouse at Rockville. The committee is expected to organize and to consider plans for the construction of the modern courthouse and jail at Rockville which has been approved by the county commissioners and the State Legislature.

Whether the committee will continue to work with the plans which have been prepared by the old committee or will begin preparing new plans has not been decided, but probably will come up for decision at the meeting today.

The board of county commissioners has directed its counsel to begin condemnation proceedings against the property on the block west of the present courthouse with a view to its early acquisition. An effort to purchase the property was unsuccessful the board feeling that the prices asked were too high.

The new committee is composed of outstanding men of the county and all are convinced that a courthouse should be erected which will adequately house the activities of the county government and at the same time present a pleasing prospect architecturally.

For this reason it was felt that to erect the new courthouse on the small park, which is the site of the present courthouse, would be a civic mistake. With the additional ground, a well-proportioned building with spacious grounds can be erected and at the same time the dangerous narrow section of Montgomery avenue above the present courthouse will be eliminated.

The members of the augmented committee are:

Dr. Benjamin C. Perry, president of the board of county commissioners; Judge Robert B. Peter, of the Rockville Circuit Court; Otho H. W. Talbot, Rockville attorney; Preston B. Ray, clerk of the circuit court; Berry E. Clark, clerk to the county commissioners; Robert G. Hilton, president of the Farmers' Banking and Trust Company of Rockville and chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee; Clagett C. Hilton, member of the board of county commissioners; Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society; George P. Sacks, of Chevy Chase; former Mayor H. P. Taff, of Takoma Park; Clyde E. Thomas, of Gaithersburg; Josiah Jones, president of the Montgomery County Farm Bureau; Maj. E. Brooke Lee, speaker of the House of Delegates and county Democratic leader; Lacy Shaw, vice president of the board of county commissioners; George E. Hamilton and George M. Hunter.

Maj. E. Brooke Lee, speaker of the House of Delegates and county Democratic leader, was the principal speaker at the celebration of the opening of the new road connecting Potomac and the Conduit road. The road is a stretch of concrete 18 feet wide and 2 miles long and is expected to be a busy thoroughfare when the proposed bridge across Great Falls is completed.

Maj. Lee spoke on the progress of road building in the county and touched upon the rapid progress in other county departments. Dr. George L. Edmonds, member of the House of Delegates and of the county board of education, and Dr. William T. Pratt, county health officer, also spoke. The speakers were introduced by Stedman Prescott, Rockville lawyer, who presided. The committee in charge of the celebration was headed by Perrie E. Waters, county register of wills.

Headed by the Potomac Concert Band, the gathering first motored over the new road. The ribbon barring the road was cut by Miss Margaret Miller following appropriate ceremonies. The band concluded the festivities with a concert.

The Montgomery County police are willing to assist the commissioner of motor vehicles in the save-a-life campaign against automobiles which are not properly prepared for safe running on the public highways, but have received no instruction, according to Chief of Police Alvie A. Moxley.

When such instructions are received from E. Austin Baughman, motor vehicle commissioner, the county police will cooperate willingly, the chief said.

WATTS TELLS RISE OF BAPTIST CHURCH

Secretary of Maryland Group Addresses Assembly in Braddock Heights.

DR. SPILLMAN SPEAKS

Special to The Washington Post.

Frederick, Md., July 18.—The Maryland Baptist summer assembly at Braddock Heights put in one of the busiest periods of the week today. Dr. Bernard W. Spillman, of Kinston, N. C., field secretary of the Southern Baptist Sunday school board, who arrived yesterday, delivered his first address this morning at the general meeting. He spoke on lesson construction in connection with Sunday school work and emphasized the importance of a thorough understanding of subjects imparted by instructors.

The enrollment today passed the 400 mark, approximately 150 more than the peak attendance last year. Prominent church leaders declare the increased attendance is an indication of growing interest in Sunday school training and church leadership.

Dr. Joseph T. Watts, of Baltimore, secretary of the State Baptist Association, addressed the church administration and a pastors' conference. He pointed out how churches, through their various organizations, functioned and the help of these organizations are to the growth of the church and spread of the gospel.

Cites Growth of Church.

He referred to the growth of the church at large and the reasons why the Baptist Church is growing in the South. He said church organizations have proved a very important factor everywhere in the development of the church and that these organizations are increasing in membership and are broadening the work in which they are engaged. In ten years, he added, the Sunday school membership of the Baptist Church has increased 1,000,000 and during the same period, from a small beginning the Baptist Young People's Union has increased its enrollment by approximately 500,000. He stressed the fact that there is no conflict between Bible class organizations and the Young People's Union, both of which function along lines of church interest and advancement and both have very useful parts in the church, he said.

Dr. Spillman was the speaker at the chatauqua meeting in the auditorium Wednesday evening, which was largely attended. Dr. W. Hershey Davis, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, a widely known clergyman, continued his lectures on New Testament interpretations. He spoke this morning on "Judging and Discrimination," and tomorrow his theme will be "Spirits in Prison." These lectures will close tomorrow.

The Sunday school conference and camps, under the direction of Mrs. S. R. Barnes, representing the Woman's Missionary Union, continued its study courses with a large enrollment. The instructors are Miss Margaret Chapin of Washington, representing the Southern Baptist Convention; Miss Jeannette White, of Baltimore, of the Woman's Missionary Union, and Rev R. Rush Loving, who has charge of the boys' camp. Rev. Loving, who is pastor of Spurgeon Memorial Baptist Church, Norfolk, and a well-konwn minister, is the instructor of a course in Sunday school administration.

The feature this afternoon was a pageant given under the direction of Mrs. C. D. Creasman, junior Sunday School specialist, entitled "A Search for Happiness." About 50 persons took part in the play.

The first business session will be held tomorrow, at which new officers will be elected, committees appointed, resolutions adopted and a place selected for next year's assembly.

VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY GIVEN BIG ESTATE

Paul G. McIntire Presents Pantops for Use in Study of Psychiatry.

NAMED BY JEFFERSON

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 18.—By a deed recorded in the clerk's office of Albemarle County this afternoon the Pantops estate became the property of the University of Virginia. Although the transfer was recorded as being a transaction between Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Landon White, former owners, and the university, the property was given to the school by Paul Goodloe McIntire.

The estate is situated about 2 miles east of Charlottesville, and consists of 363 acres of land and several large buildings. Its sale pprice to Mr. McIntire was $47,500.

No definite plans for the utilization of the property have been announced. It is understood, however, that it is the wish of the donor that it be used by the University Medical School for the further study of psychiatry and as a convalescent home in connection with the University Hospital.

Pantops is one of the historic estates of Albemarle County. It was once owned by George Rogers Clark, whose father was one of the original grantees in 1734. Some years later it was bought by Thomas Jefferson, who gave it the unique name—choosing it from the Homeric Greek—"all seeing" because of its extensive view. For 26 years Pantops Academy, one of the most famous boys' schools of the State, was conducted there and was discontinued in 1906.

On the estate are three large two-story buildings, one with sixteen rooms and a large central hall, 32 by 32 feet; another has twenty rooms, and the third has fifteen. There are also two five-room cottages, two large barns and a large gymnasium. The buildings will be remodeled.

Man on Trial at Chatham For Murder During Dance

Special to The Washington Post.

Chatham, Va., July 18.—Trial was begun here today in circuit court of Harold Gibson, who last December, it is alleged, shot and killed Lester Bradner, at a country dance. Vaden Bradner, a brother of the victim, recovered. Four were involved in the cross fire. Gibson is contending that he shot in self defense.

BYRD PAYS $30,000 FOR ORCHARD TRACT

Virginia Governor Interested in Investment Project With Brother.

RISING VALUES ARE SEEN

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 18.—Purchase of the Bunker Hill Orchard, 150-acre plantation here, from Gen. Clarke and other Shinnston (W. Va.) men, by Gov. Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, has been announced. The price was given as $30,000, or $200 an acre. Gov. Byrd is investing an estimated $5,000 in immediate improvements to the property.

The orchard is his first in West Virginia. He owns a number of orchard properties in Virginia, fifteen miles from Bunker Hill. Thomas Byrd, of Winchester, Va., a brother, is interested in a number of such investments with him.

The $200-per-acre scale was accepted by apple men and business men here as a fair indication of the increasing value of orchard properties. A banker here, whose business views are accepted as conservative, said today he regarded good bearing orchards as worth $500 an acre and he foresaw sales in the near future at that figure. Over a period of years his figures showed a net profit per barrel of apples of between $2.75 and $3. With a 40-barrel-per-acre production average, this would mean—with the cost of production deducted—an estimated $1 per barrel net, or $40 per acre, representing a 6 per cent return on approximately $700. More efficient management will reduce the $2-per-barrel cost of production, he figures, and raise the per-tree production so that an orchard efficiently managed would increase its rate of net income or increase its value if only the 6 per cent rate is anticipated.
